Businesses must be adaptable in tough times

Editor's note: This is the first half of a two-part interview with Toni Jepson and Gary Luce of the Carmel Business Association.

Jepson has been executive director since December of 1990, and Luce is in the middle of his second term as president.

The CBA is 505 members strong, with 375 of those members from within Carmel-by-the-Sea proper. In all, roughly 60 percent of Carmel-by-the-Sea businesses belong to the association.

By PAUL WOLF

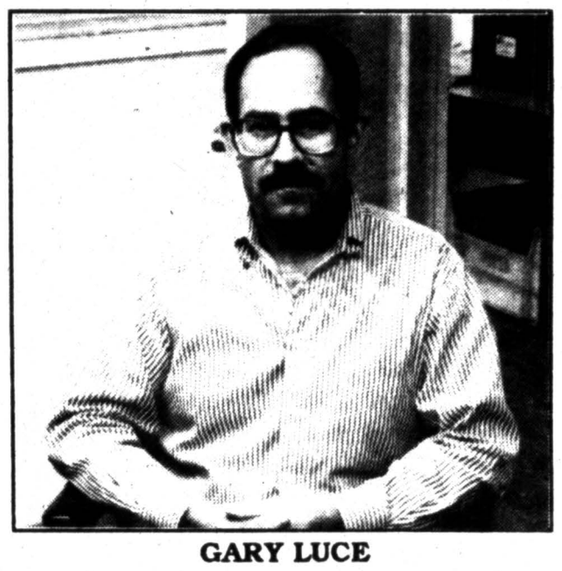
WITH A backdrop of diminished sales tax revenue and stagnant motel occupancy, business leaders in Carmel have been in a heightened state of alert.

It may be too soon for panic, but the time is right for some thoughtful discussion about the current economic problems.

The key question is, what can the city, the CBA and the residents do during this time of recession?

Toni Jepson and Gary Luce, while sympathetic with the plight of the small business owner, stress that times change and so do markets. While tourist-serving enterprises are expected to conform to the "village character" of Carmel, so businesses traditionally serving residents must learn to be "adaptable."

For them, it could be a matter of survival.



GARY LUCE

Pine Cone: How badly has the recession hit Carmel? And what sectors of our commercial life have been the hardest hit?

Jepson: In some ways Carmel's been very lucky for a long time, and the recession has now come to Carmel. People are still coming, but they don't seem to be spending the money. Certainly high-ticket items are down. They will still buy little mementos, but they are not buying a lot of what they came to Carmel for originally.

Luce: People definitely seem to be on a budget. I think we have been lucky that

Can the city reverse trends in the commercial district?

Editor's note: This is the second installment in a five-part special report analyzing the findings of the Carmel 2016 Committee Report, which envisions Carmel-by-the-Sea in the year of its centennial. This article focuses on the hopes and dreams for Carmel's commercial district now in transition.

MARK HOUSEMAN of Carmel Hardware pointed to a line of decorative faucets on display in his store window fronting Junipero Avenue. Each faucet was adorned with a frog or a rabbit, making for an unusual collection to be found in a neighborhood hardware store.

"We are so small that, to survive, we have to go with some stuff that attracts tourists," said Houseman, the son in this mom-and-pop establishment where he's worked since he was a teenager.

The $30 items that tourists should buy contrast nicely to the 10-cent screws that residents do buy. The faucets are a fitting symbol of what is happening to local-serving retail businesses in Carmel.

For the past eight months, Carmel Hardware has been for sale. "We don't want to close," Houseman said. "We hope it can stay a hardware store."

High rents are elbowing out small-time operators, who cannot compete with tourist-serving enterprises.

While everyone agrees preserving local-serving business is important for Carmel, the question is, "How is it to be accomplished?

The 2016 Committee Report is based on the consensus of the committee's 14 members. The report, from the vantage point of the year 2016, reads:

The business district continues to prosper because of the ongoing city program to maintain a diversified economic base, rather than tourist retail only. The program encourages small, unique stores; a strong contingent of local ownership; incentives for resident-serving businesses...

What would such "incentives" be? Can the city contribute toward paying rents for certain businesses? Could the city purchase commercial property and house needed businesses? How many businesses could the city realistically assist?

"As far as this town goes, it's just too expensive," said Houseman, whose rent is $2.35 a square foot for 750 square feet total. "People want to stay in Carmel, but it is getting tougher and tougher to do. I really can't see a solution."

Houseman said the hardware store does only about 5 percent of its trade with tourists. One major reason for that low

PBC job cuts, salary and bonus increases

ALTHOUGH SOME employees at Pebble Beach voice fears about losing their jobs and other belt tightening measures, up to this point changes by the new owners, Lone Cypress Co., are minor.

According to documents obtained by The Pine Cone, the major change in the past year is the elimination of 11 positions that saves the company $654,000. But the reduction did not save the company money. The savings was used to increase salary and bonuses for existing employees.

More than one-third of the cost-cutting reduction went to increase the salaries and bonuses of seven top managers who, with one exception, already make over $100,000 per year.

By eliminating the 11 positions the company protects a bonus system that totaled $314,000 for 1991. Positions eliminated ranged from five in the $20,000 to $30,000 range and four above $50,000, including one at $160,000. Planned bonuses for 1992 totals $295,750. After increasing bonuses and salaries, several in double digits, eliminating the 11 positions will save a mere 2.1 percent in the 1992 budget.

For 241 management and salaried exempt employees, out of a total of 1200 employees, the total proposed compensation for 1992 amounts to $9.4 million. Bonuses are paid in the following the year.

Salaries

"This was a reorganization really," said one of the people eliminated. "In light of the small savings, I can't say whether this was a panicked response to the economy or the result of long range planning. There were no immediate savings. It will take 6 to 8 months to see any bottom line savings."

An analysis of the salary documents reveals that 11 management and salaried exempt employees of the Pebble Beach Co. make less than

Exec committee perks add up to substantial deal

FOR THE top 10 at Pebble Beach — the executive committee members — an additional package of benefits is available. The executive committee consists of the president and executive vice president, the manager of the hotels, the head of corporate sales, the president's secretary, the head of golf, the vice president of community affairs, the retail administrator and the head of corporate marketing.

The benefit package available to the executive committee is in addition to the benefits offered to all company salaried employees and includes: life insurance at 2.5 to 4 times salary, membership at Spanish Bay and the Beach Club, auto allowance of $400 per month, air fare for under three hours flying time, retail discounts, a "departmental promotion" account limited to business that excludes wines over $40 per bottle, an "individual promotion" account of $7,500, $1,200 of dry cleaning, two cords of firewood per year, golf fees, cellular phones and discounts on rooms. Benefits of 401K plans are being considered.

Sticks and stones

"STICKS AND stones may break my bones, but words will never hurt me."

We learned the rhyme from our mother when, as a small and impressionable child, we came home totally devastated because some kid down the block called us "names."

There was a logic to the rhyme and a message we quickly understood: words couldn't cause physical harm, only children's weapons. Sticks and stones. Regardless of whether the name-calling carried a grain of truth or was the insensitive taunting of a jealous rival , one thing was clear.

The words were to the point.

We wish that were the case today. Instead, we hide behind euphemisms.

Children use excuses as substitutes for saying they're sorry.

Government, at any level, doesn't spend, it invests.

It's not hot, it's unseasonably warm.

Tourists don't come to Carmel, visitors do.

And on and on.

It's all a reflection of a society afraid of expressing a weakness, a society obsessed with control, of not wanting the bare truth exposed for fear of losing that control. And herded together, we buy our own meaningless jabber.

What a shame.

Bravo to Laura

Dear Editor:

I really need to begin by thanking Laura Hamilton for her letter to you in the July 9 issue. Bravo to you Laura, for your tasteful candidness; I share your opinion whole heartedly.

Considering myself as a local, even though I reside elsewhere now, I spent my childhood through two years at Monterey Peninsula College.

Going to the Mission Ranch was always the place my parents and I would go in my adult years. good service, a comfortable atmosphere, a suitable menu for almost any palate, and a gathering place for locals after dinner to vocalize with Yvonne's piano playing was the Ranch.

I read Hiram Powers' dining review in the June 26 Herald issue, and I was aghast! My mom and I still patronized the Mission Ranch even after my dad's passing on; it was a place where we could relax, enjoy the company of friends, and eat fulfillingly. On June 23 I had the quesadilla. I have never tasted one so bland, empty, and unappealing. I welcome Mr. Powers to taste my own making of a quesadilla.

As I began, I applaud Laura for her article. I, too, am concerned with the Ranch's future. I am sorry to say that if it remains as it is, with its "new pseudo-French California Nouveau-Italian-Southwestern style menu" (thank you, Laura), you will see less and less of us locals. We will find our grazing elsewhere!

School suggestions

Dear Editor:

More education; less vacation.

1. Lengthen school year to June 30.
2. Add one hour to each day.
3. Open rooms necessary to help individual students Saturday, 9 to 11. Limit class to 10 or less. Use volunteer senior citizens qualified to teach such subjects as:

Reading, math, English, science, language, etc.

Think about this!

Summer camp two to four weeks for all students who wish to attend.

Financial status

Dear Editor:

Regarding the financial status of Carmel one need look no further than the C.R.A. In their eagerness to protect the residential character of Carmel in conjunction with the motto on the wall they have pushed Carmel business into such a corner that we have a tremendous vacancy factor of business property with a resulting lack of tax base. They (C.R.A. members) never choose to recognize the fact that the business community has been paying most of our taxes for years, and making it possible for us to live in such a delightful community.

The C.R.A. has been pushing to spend more and more money for park and open space and mini parks until we are broke. It appears our money is gone to pay for the Rio Road wasteland, and the Sixth and Lincoln park. Sixth and Lincoln with a little planning could have been a self-paying garage for 50 cars with a simple park on the top and toilet facilities within.

There is hardly a need for an economic survey of the downtown area. Anyone who has taken a high school course in economics can see that three different commercial ratings are hardly justified in a town of this size. They are only damaging. We need to make it comfortable to open a business in Carmel and not throw blocks in the way whenever an enterprising business appears. Simplify the business district. Don't make it more difficult. Our mayor started out with that in mind but since election has let the C.R.A. get through to him has lost the way and dropped the ball. We had a well designed commercial zone in 1980 that would suffice very well, and which the planning commission has recommended, from Fifth and Seventh. This would restore some of the business that has been lost as well as replenish our treasury.

Barbara Brooks has already cost us one expensive election with her silly ideas. We do not need another one, nor do we need an out of town "expert." We have plenty of talent and experience right here in Carmel.

KAZU picks start date of disputed format change

By JOHN DETRO

ECLECTIC KAZU Public Radio will switch to the disputed strip programming—certain musical genres in stable daily time slots—on Aug. 3.

The declaration came from Program Director Peter Williams, who added during an interview:

"The kinks haven't been worked out yet. I'll talk with all the people (on-air volunteers) and see who can commit to the new format. We'll try to keep everybody here. The variable will be whether they can adjust their (personal) schedules."

And if they can't? "We'll look at the (new time and format needs) and see what we can figure out." Williams replied. "We don't want to get rid of people. This (change) is to help the station grow."

Williams today has some idea of how the programming strips will look. He said jazz shows will occupy the 4-6:30 p.m. weekday slot with a new national service—Pacifica Radio News (PRN)—airing over KAZU from 6:30-7 p.m. Monday through Friday. PRN also will commence there on Aug. 3.

"Every morning," Williams said, "we'll repeat (PRN) segments from the night before. A half hour will be broken up into three 10-minute segments at 6:50, 7:50 and 8:50. We'll have drive time news. We're also working on a local news show, but let's not talk about that until we can really put our news department together. The commitment is made."

MPTV to beam KJAZ to cable subscribers in "near future"

LOCAL JAZZ buffs have cause to celebrate today.

Spokesmen for MPTV Cable say KJAZ radio, Alameda-based jazz radio station which broadcasts Monterey Jazz Festival in full, will return to the peninsula firm's FM cable lineup in "late August or early September."

KJAZ was bumped off the cable many weeks ago when MPTV introduced Digital Music Express, a service to stereo systems which required more FM radio channels than were available.

"There are several factors involved (in the return of KJAZ)," it was stated on MPTV's behalf. "One of these certainly is response from the community. By far, KJAZ has the strongest community support of any out-of-the-area station. We thank our customers for their input."

The latest MPTV statement on Wednesday cleared up some confusion. The company issued a press release saying KJAZ would be back on the cable beginning Aug. 17, but then came a FAX saying that date and backup technical data were incorrect.

"It (the KJAZ comeback) is definite," the spokesmen said Wednesday. "The technical situation turns out to be a bit more complicated than we thought. We'll be issuing another statement on the matter in the very near future."

Bach board keeps festival humming

By ANNE PAPINEAU

TO QUOTE the executive director, the 25 members of the Carmel Bach Festival Board of Directors are its "ultimate volunteers." They are a diverse lot sharing a common goal: bringing the best of baroque music to Carmel each summer.

The festival hasn't reached its 55th season by chance. The board, while diverse, is also dedicated and highly organized. Meet three of those 25 who help keep the festival alive.

ARTIST Emile Norman's association with the Carmel Bach Festival began in the most casual way.

"A friend and I were shopping in Carmel on a Sunday afternoon. We were both wearing old work clothes," recalls Norman, noted for his wood inlay sculptures. "I saw a line of people going into Sunset Auditorium so I went to the box office and asked what is happening."

They had chanced upon a performance of Bach's The Passion According to St. Matthew, and the conductor was Gastone Usigli. Casually dressed, Norman attended his first Carmel Bach Festival performance.

He doesn't recall exactly what year that was, (Usigli was replaced by Sandor Salgo in 1956), but Norman has remained devoted to the festival ever since.

"I immediately became a season ticket holder," Norman says.

"I'm on my third conductor," Norman quips. During his years in the audience, he has seen the festival grow to a three-week event, with the week's worth of concerts repeated twice to accommodate demand.

"Sandor said to me, 'You come all three weeks. Why?' I answered him, "Because you don't give it for four weeks.' "

Norman maintains a home in Carmel that is a showcase for his artwork and a base from which to enjoy the Carmel Bach Festival. And he attends everything, the recitals, the lectures, the concerts. For much of the year, he lives and works at a Big Sur studio, his "paradise" that is four miles from the highway.

"Last year I was asked to go on the board, and while I'd been asked before, I had no time. Now I'm very happy to be on the board, to preach Bach," he says, eyes atwinkle.

"I'm an artist, and I'm so aware of design. Bach was a great designer. I can hear the same piece over and over and still be moved by the music, it's so rich. In Big Sur my cupboards are bulging with records, but there is nothing to compare with live music."

Norman says that his chief contribution to the board is to serve as a

MAX "BUD" Drewien, a Carmel Area Wastewater District employee, packs his equipment, including a portable phone, in an old, tattered Voit golf bag.

The bag, with pockets missing and resting on a tiny golf cart with bald tires, has obviously seen its day.

'It's been around," Drewien admits, "but it sure got a lot of comments during the U.S Open last month. I learned more about golf than I thought I'd ever know, and I was born and raised here."

Drewien, a Carmel Valley resident, might be a bit modest. In a game where discussing scores and super shots is tantamount to legalized perjury, Drewien unabashedly told everybody during the U.S. Open week that the bag formerly belonged to Arnold Palmer.

Could be.

High bacteria count prompts closure at Carmel River Lagoon

COUNTY HEALTH officials posted signs at the Carmel River Lagoon last week, warning potential swimmers that contact with the water there could cause serious illness.

The culprit is fecal coliform bacteria, a common organism associated with animal feces and agricultural runoff.

The water at the river's end has been stagnant for many weeks due to lack of rain. The bacteria "divide and multiply" very rapidly when no opportunity for dilution exists, explained Walter Wong, director of the county's department of environmental health.

The county conducts tests of the water at the lagoon once or twice a month. But warning signs went up July 22 when health inspectors checked the lagoon and found it contained 1300 fecal coliform bacteria per milliliter of water — nearly seven times the level considered safe.

"Anything below 200 is considered safe," said Walter Wong, county environmental health director.

The Carmel River Lagoon will remain closed to swimmers until the concentration of bacteria is diluted sufficiently through rain or by opening the sand bar separating the river from the ocean.

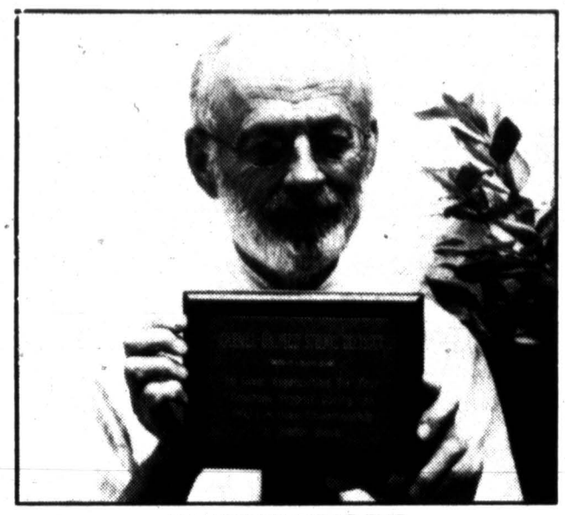
U.S.Open volunteer efforts pay off for Carmel schools

By SCOTT BREARTON

THE PEBBLE Beach Co. made good on its promise to reward U.S. Open volunteers for their efforts during the tournament and paid up – to the tune of $70,000 for the Carmel Unified School District.

CUSD President Hilton Bialek accepted the check on behalf of the district at a special luncheon held at Spanish Bay July 23. The company also presented the district with a plaque thanking volunteers for their diligent efforts during the tournament.

"I think it was a win-win situation," Bialek said. "We got $70,000 and Pebble Beach got a lot of motivated, trained volunteers."



HILTON BIALEK

Representatives from other Monterey County school districts that participated in the volunteer effort attended the luncheon. The Pebble Beach Co. also distributed $70,000 to the Pacific Grove Unified School District.

At a board meeting June 23, Bialek gave special thanks to Fred Herro, who led the CUSD U.S. Open volunteer effort. "He did an outstanding job," Bialek noted. "He put in 12 hours a day as a volunteer."

According to the CUSD, the U.S. Open money will be distributed to Carmel schools based on enrollment.

The breakdown in terms of dollars per school is as follows:

•Carmel High School, $19,800.

•Carmel Middle School, $16,500.

•Tularcitos Elementary School, $15,650.

• River Elementary School, $14,300

•Captain Cooper Elementary School, $2,150.

•Carmel Valley High School, $1,400.

Police beat

All quiet on the Carmel front

HERE AT the height of summer, as tourists continue to pack the town (the recession notwithstanding), all is quiet on the crime front.

"That's fine with me," said Carmel Sgt. Dan Clark. "There is not much to report. We are quite lucky."

As early as the U.S. Open in June, and then right on through Independence Day and the rest of July, there have been few serious incidents to trouble local law enforcement.

Stolen license plates

Meanwhile, police report a rash of incidents concerning stolen license plates.

Plates were stolen from cars parked at Torres and 10th Avenue, Lincoln and 6th Avenue, and on Scenic Road. The three were taken on July 25 and 26. In each case, the plates were simply unscrewed and hauled off, said Clark.

Police have no suspects.

2016 Committee report

volume is the comparatively remote location of the store.

"As much as we don't want Carmel to change, we have to be realistic," said Councilman Phil Coniglio, who worked many years in the mom-and-pop establishment of his family's Mediterranean Market.

The Costco alternative

"All the little towns are having the same problems. In retailing, mass is just more efficient — and the savings get passed on to the consumers. People want value for their dollar. They go to Costco and the Office Club."

On the issue of incentives for local-serving businesses, Toni Jepson, executive director of the Carmel Business Association, explained that they may be easier said than done.

"The (Carmel) general plan has called for incentives for a long time, and there haven't been any," Jepson said. "The fact is, we have 4,200 residents, and our businesses cannot survive on that alone."

The report articulates the committee's "visions" of the new face of the commercial district by the time of the city's centennial: two blocks closed to traffic once a week to accommodate a European farmers' market; wider sidewalks to accommodate pedestrians; a program of all-day parking for a fee.

"It's a wonderful vision," said Coniglio. "I love European cities, but we are not pedestrian-oriented. As much as I would like to see Ocean Avenue a mall, it's not practical."

The councilman raised some questions: How do the older residents convey themselves throughout town without their cars? What alleys do the delivery trucks have if they can't use the streets?

But committee member Ann Beckett said the report, while leaving details out, managed to express shared values and hopes. "It was amazing to me that people from these diverse backgrounds could agree."

General commitment

Despite the difficult economic challenges, the report retains a general commitment to a well-maintained downtown that encourages pedestrian traffic, where streets are adorned with flowers and equipped with benches and drinking fountains.

The report seems to start with an assumption: that current city regulations, like those restricting fast food enterprises and Tee-shirt shops, may only be a start in doing what is needed to preserve Carmel's downtown character.

The CBA's Jepson speaks of the need for "long-range planning." While there are no guarantees of turning certain visions into reality, the alternative to taking action is surely to encounter more casualties like Carmel Hardware.

Swapping city-owned land for Pescadero lot has promise

By PAUL WOLF

As THE community's hopes to buy Pescadero Canyon lots have grabbed most of the attention so far, the quiet efforts of the city to acquire at least one property through a land swap could be bearing fruit.

Perhaps the most hopeful sign so far is the optimism expressed by Chris Tescher, who is half the partnership of Tescher-Levett Investments which owns a 24,000 square-foot vacant canyon lot.

The parcel is the largest of four vacant lots on the Carmel portion of of the canyon. Earlier this year, Tescher received approval from the Carmel Planning Commission for the construction of a single-family home.

"It looks like an exchange is becoming a more and more viable solution," said Tescher, speaking in a phone interview.

He said it is possible his partnership and the city will have worked out a land swap deal that would be satisfactory to Tescher, city officials and a small army of residents who have been concerned about a possible new development.

The six Pescadero Canyon lots — two of which have homes on them — are on the north side of town in a lush, forested area between the Pebble Beach border and Second Avenue.

Strong movement

There has been a strong movement opposing Tescher's proposed single-family home, but the city council has admitted it has no money to buy the partnership out. Meanwhile, against all odds, concerned residents have begun to launch a grass-roots fund-raising effort to acquire the land.

Word has circulated around town that the land swap could include Tescher's property for a parcel of vacant city rights of way — sacrificial city property on the order of 5,000 square feet. As many as nine properties are being considered for the exchange with Tescher-Levett.

With negotiations in a sensitive place at present, details about where the targeted city rights of way are located could not be released.

"Everyone would come out looking like heroes," said Tescher about the prospect of a successful land swap. "I'd come out looking like a guy who is not just in it for the money — which is true. The city looks like a hero, and Noel Mapstead (a leading project opponent) looks like a hero."

It has been Mapstead's argument that there is a legal basis for blocking the construction of any home on the Tescher-Levett property. Most residents and city officials, however, assume that Tescher would have to be granted some kind of minimal use of his property.

What would be heroic for the city would be the sense that it has secured precious land for what seems like no price at all — just that of otherwise unused roadway.

Bach Festival board ranks with the best of volunteers lobbyist for keeping the focus on J.S. Bach.

"I started out as a child hearing my grandmother sing Bach," he says. "I never got over that. I fell in love with Mr. Bach very early on. I believe we need to return to a predominance of Bach's music. I can go to San Francisco and hear classical music. As for Carmel, Bach is so prolific we'll never hear all his works."

The event has given him many pleasurable memories.

"I remember one year when Sandor did the St. Matthew Passion, he put down his baton and left the stage and then the soloists left the stage. There was no applause — just magic. I just left the auditorium and went to Point Lobos to take a walk. That was definitely a high point."

He also voices enthusiasm for the new conductor, Bruno Weil. "I'm very excited. He's made of music, every movement of his body.

"I think musicians are my favorite people. I want to be reincarnated as a good musician," the artist adds.

Enthusiasm colors the voice of Roberta Bialek, first vice president, who is better known around Sunset Center as "Bertie."

Amateur pianist, 30-year Carmel resident, homemaker, Bialek is the first to admit that serving on the board is no job for for wimps. And she calls its challenges immensely rewarding.

"It's fun keeping up the tradition of what those two women started (festival co-founders Dene Denny and Hazel Watrous). Besides loving the music and besides enjoying the other people I've met, it's a wonderful challenge to try to make the festival work," she says. "It's extremely hard to keep a performing arts organization in the black. I like that challenge. With the Bach Festival, your chances are improved of making it work."

Golden Chairs

Bialek was instrumental in helping to launch the Golden Chairs program in 1987. Donors who give between $10,000 and $50,000 to the fund receive continuous identification as "Golden Chair" givers and help build a continuing source of income which helps ensure the long-term financial security of the festival.

"It's a way to make an enduring gift, and to be associated with a particular instrument or soloist," she explains. "You need an endowment as a support system and you don't want to raise ticket prices."

She accepts as very serious the job of keeping the festival financially solvent.

"I would say all the board members are involved in fundraising. We have the ultimate legal responsibility to the festival — we have to keep it in business. We match up the right people with the right jobs. We feel very happy with our staff, our musicians."

Although the event itself occupies three weeks in summer, Bialek and her fellow board members serve the festival year-round. But it is work she says she's glad to do, for since childhood Bach's music has enriched her world.

"We have the challenge of educating younger people to the particular wonders of this music," she notes. "We have Bruce Lamott developing our outreach program. And we have the immediate challenge of making the transition to our new conductor.

"Essentially I love this music," Bialek adds. "There are a lot of nice boards out there, and I've been on many. But my first priority here is I particularly love Bach's music. It's really a privilege. And it's an educational experience. We heard the lieder performed the other night, and the three of us decided afterward that we'd like to learn German."

Davis Factor, Jr. manages his real estate and securities investments from a spacious Carmel office. But he also reports to a non-paying job, serving as president of the Carmel Bach Festival board.

He brings a businessman's acumen to what he calls "basically a management and marketing job." Factor was voted president in April 1991 and took office last October, but his affiliation with the festival stretches back to the early 1980s, when he established a home in Carmel with his wife, artist Gail Factor, and their daughter.

"We had tickets to the festival in 1980 but couldn't attend because our baby was only three months old. But we had tickets in 1981, and travelled up from L.A. My wife and I are very attracted by baroque music."

The Factors moved to Carmel in 1983, and they wasted no time in getting involved with the festival. They helped launch the Carmel Bach Festival Associates, its fundraising arm, at the request of then-president Jo Barton.

Factor was elected to the board in '84, and has refined the organizational and business side of the event. He views his role as providing "the overall support that allows Bruno Weil to put on a wonderful festival."

"We've upgraded the data management system. It's now state-of-the-art, so we hope to give better service to our audience and donors," he says.

"We now have an executive director (Nana Faridany), and I think we have an excellent office staff."

Annual budget

Factor notes that the festival needed a paid executive director, someone who could oversee its many facets and serve as liaison to the board president.

"Nana is fully responsible for administration. The board president no longer has so many different people reporting to him ... my responsibility is more defined."

He could also see that the festival, which has an annual budget of between $750,000 and $800,000, required a substantial endowment program. Thus was born the Golden Chair plan.

"This is a real roll-up-your-sleeves board," says Factor. "We've made a lot of progress, creating a much stronger and better defined management group. This is also a labor of love. I'm very pleased to have the opportunity to be in this position in this very unique time in the festival's history."

His job is a large one, and Factor admits that, when thinking of this "volunteer army," at times "I'm concerned I've overlooked some dedicated, energetic person. Despite the sheer numbers, I try to make people understand they're appreciated. I love the music, I enjoy the association with the arts. I really admire and respect the people I'm working with."

CBA answers

we have been able to survive as well as we have. I think people who are traveling now are a different type of customer; they perhaps don't have the disposable income they had at one time. We just have to learn how to market for all segments.

Pine Cone: Does this suggest that the hostelry industry is not being as hurt by the recession as the retail industry?

Jepson: Yes, occupancy is down a little bit, but retail is down further.

For the first time this summer, I've seen people offering packages, discounted rates; whereas traditionally that never happened during the summer.

Another thing is, I think we are seeing a shorter length of stay. People used to come for two or three nights — I think our average was two nights — and our average has definitely decreased. So they are coming for shorter periods and they are not spending as much.

Pine Cone: If there is not a recovery soon, what will be the outcome? What can we expect?

Jepson: Well, I don't see the town closing or anything like that. People are ready to hold on for a little while. We were hoping we'd see a bit more of a recovery this summer and we are not seeing that. But I think that most of the businesses in Carmel are well-heeled enough that they can maintain for a little while. I'm sure that there are some that probably can't, and they probably — and unfortunately — will have to close. But I don't see this being a ghost town.

Pine Cone: Are price wars a possibility in this kind of business climate?

Jepson: I don't think Carmel will come to that. I think we need to get on the band wagon and start marketing and inviting people to come. We do know people are still travelling. But we have a lot of competition from other destinations. Aside from the recession, this has been one of our problems all along. We've just assumed that these people were going to come forever, and stay for three or four or five days. But there is too much competition now. We have to get out there and get in the market place.

I keep saying we are having a party and not sending out invitations — and other (destinations) are.

Pine Cone: Who, generally speaking, has been financing the CBA's advertising budget?

Jepson: We have asked the city to contribute. Last year the city did give us $17,500, much of which was used to send out our Guide to Carmel-by-the-Sea to potential visitors. This year we have asked them for $38,000, which we hope we will be able to use for direct advertising and marketing to travel agents and people like that.

Pine Cone: Is their any way to encourage local people to "shop Carmel?" Are we pretty much stuck with everyone wanting to go to Safeway or Costco?

Luce: I think that Toni would agree and our members would agree that you cannot blame our current situation totally on the recession. We were experiencing a change in customer base long before any recession was announced or felt.

As for the resident-serving business issue, I'm not sure any community no matter what size in the country is not experiencing the same thing we are right now.

Our job as good business people is to find out what our customers want — the visitor and the resident — and to be able to give them that product. If we are not able to do that, if they are competitive shopping and can find things for less money — that is what is going to happen.

I think when we are talking about "resident-serving" business, it means a lot of residents are saying is they want to maintain the village atmosphere. And in doing so, they are looking for more resident-serving types of business. I think our visitors are actually looking for the same thing.

Jepson: I was just speaking this afternoon with Sacramento Old Town, someone with their business association, and they have a much more severe problem than we do.

They have a lot of Tee-shirt shops, and I don't think that is necessarily bad. But they have very few restrictions, and as this person was telling me, all the shops hang their Tee-shirts outside, and they have big red banners. We don't want to see that ever happen to Carmel.

TONI JEPSON

But, on the other hand, if people have to change their merchandise to be able to survive, they can do it in a tasteful way and respond to the market. We have to allow that to happen.

We have a beautiful village, and all of us want to retain its character. After all, that's what people come here for. We can't be tied in to the idea that nothing can change, because life changes, the marketplace changes.

KAZU strip programing to replace old, eclectic ways

Williams mentioned other musical classifications that would get their own strips. He declined to make a formal announcement, however, before the aforementioned "kinks" were addressed. He did say that New Age music would not occupy an individual strip.

Williams said KAZU staff members believe strip programming will "help build the audience and make our sound more consistent." That idea has moved through some stormy emotional weather over the past several weeks:

• When Williams began discussing the change with volunteer broadcasters, some on-air people claimed their number never had been consulted. A general meeting was held at a Monterey hotel.

• Dissident broadcasters called a meeting of their own at Monterey Public Library. Williams appeared unannounced and said the strip notion would be "put on hold."

•At a meeting of the KAZU board, many volunteer programmers made sometimes heated statements about the proposed shift. Station Manager Rebecca Little called for another general session at which a professional facilitator could help staff and volunteers work out their differences.

No notification

Little said the public would be invited —"the public's always invited." This writer asked both Little and Williams to tell the newspaper when the gathering would happen. They agreed, but notification did not occur. "It wasn't on purpose," Williams said some days ago when asked for an explanation. "I was busy. I forgot."

Upshot? "The meeting was held in late June without a facilitator," Williams said after making his statements about strip schedules and the news service commencing on Aug. 3. "The reaction was mixed. Some (volunteers) didn't like (the change) and some did. Just like anything else...."

His job at hand, Williams said, was to "discuss their (air) times one-on-one with individual programmers. They have helped the station grow. We certainly don't want to get rid of anyone."

Meanwhile, a mimeographed flyer in the KAZU lobby said a leader among dissident programmers—Leslie Shill—was seriously ill at Community Hospital. The sheet invited "cards and prayers." It said he was in Room 2316.

Williams said Pacific Radio News also provides access to a deep file of special programs. A promotional letter from PRN said: "PRN is a project of the Pacifica Foundation. Pacifiica was founded after World War Two by a group of people who were opposed to war...The fiirst Pacifica station, (Berkeley's) KPFA, went on the air in 1949. Now, 40 years later, Pacifica operates five stations, a program archive and, of course, Pacifica Radio News."

PETER WILLIAMS

And: "(PRN) is on the air five days a week...with Pacifica's special perspective on the news. We cover national and international news with six to 10 stories a day. We have our own reporters in Washington, D.C., where the newscast is put together, and draw on a large list of contributors from around the country and around the world."

Pebble Beach Co. changes

$20,000 per year. The largest portion, 96 employees, make between $21,000 and $29,000 per year, while 74 make from $30,000 to $40,000 per year. A total of 34 people make between $41,000 and $50,000. The top managers at Pebble Beach, a total of 22 people, make more than $51,000 per year. Six make more than $100,000.

Those making over $100,000 include the general manager of the hotels, the head of corporate accounting, the executive vice president, the head of golf, and the retail administrator. As might be expected, the president receives the top salary of $274,000, but details about additional compensation, including bonuses, were not available.

These salaries are before bonuses and several represent substantial increases in salary over 1991. For example, the general manager of the hotels received an increase in salary of 15 percent, corporate accounting 10 percent, the executive vice president 10 percent, the head of golf 18 percent, the president 10 percent and the retail administrator a whopping 25 percent. In the lower ranks, those making less than $40,000 per year, the salary increases were more modest, averaging 3 to 4 percent.

While spokesmen refused to answer previous questions about the salary and bonus system at Pebble Beach Co., one former employee commented, "It's not appropriate to ask questions about bonuses or compensation."

Bonus system

While bonuses increase employees's basic salaries, most are modest. The majority of proposed bonuses for 1992 range between $500 to $3,000. A total of 31 employees will receive bonuses of $500, 57 of $1,000, 29 of $1,500 and 19 between $2,000 and $3,000.

As reported in an earlier issue of The Pine Cone, much higher bonuses will be doled out to several top managers. The general manager of the hotels will $15,000 (received $20,000 in 1991), the head of corporate accounting $10,000 ($12,000 in 1991), the executive vice president $20,000 (the same as in 1991), the head of golf $15,000 ($20,000 in 1991) and the retail administrator $20,000 (twice the 1991 bonus).

The retail administrator appears to have the most rapidly increasing salary with a 9 percent increase over 1990 and a 25 percent increase over 1991. At the same time the bonus doubled from $10,000 in 1991. One inside source said the individual holding the position began in the department four years ago at a $24,000 salary. This could not be confirmed, nor could possible changes in responsibility, which could account for the rapidly escalating income.

Previous questions about the basis of the bonus plan at Pebble Beach were directed to managers and spokespersons, but they refused to comment or return phone calls.

"The bonus list is at the whim of management and always has been," said one former manager. "Specifically, the president of the company has the final say to change bonuses up or down or eliminate them."

Another former manager at Pebble Beach agreed that the company is personality based, but explained that there was input on bonuses and salaries from department heads and owners. The president would like for employees to think he has all the power, he said.

"I don't think the company is well organized or efficient," said the former manager. "I'd base the company more on performance. For example, the question to ask about the elimination of positions is; were the right people terminated? You have to look at the bigger picture."

According to officials at the California Department of Employment (EDD), finding similar managerial jobs to those at Pebble Beach won't be easy. While overall job openings are holding steady, there is stiff competition for good jobs in the area. Jobs that pay $60,000 to $80,000 in Santa Clara Valley, for example, pay $40,000 to $50,000 in Monterey County. Several former employees have been forced to move out of the area to continue their careers and several continue to provide services to Pebble Beach.

"We have a surplus of managerial people in this area," said Sue Woodburn, office manager at EDD. "So many people want to come here to live that's it's kept salary structure lower than in other areas."

PBC executive benefit packages

Additional proposed changes in benefits for the management and salaried exempt employees will also effect the executive committee and include: three weeks vacation after two years instead of eight years and four weeks of vacation after 10 years instead of 20 years; and increased sick pay from a maximum of 30 days to 60 days. Paid holidays are reduced from nine days per year to seven days.

For comparison, proposed changes that will effect hourly workers include increasing deductible for medical/dental care from $100 to $200, decreasing the years required for three weeks vacation from 8 years to 5 years and making employees pay for 20 percent of educational assistance up to $500 per year (formerly 100% was covered).

In comparison to managerial and nonexempt workers, the 300 union members at The Lodge, Beach & Tennis Club, Spyglass and Del Monte grills agreed to a new 4 1/2 -year contract in April that includes wage increases averaging 3.28 percent per year for non-tipped employees and 1.9 percent for tipped employees. Other benefits include two additional paid sick leave days, accumulation of 12 unused paid sick days and leaves of absences of up to 120 days to care for ill family members.

"We felt real good about the agreement," said Leonard O'Neil, secretary treasure of Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees Local 483. "It's one of the best we came away with out of the hotels we negotiated with. The Lodge is the highest paying contract we have in hotels we have under contract."

Carmel Valley Outlook

Carmel Valley village

One last chance: a job in 'el norte'

By SUSAN BECK

ALMOST EVERY day for the past two months Elutero Duarte has arrived at Kasey's in Carmel Valley by 7 a.m.

Almost every day for the past three years Hector Aldana has arrived at Kasey's by 7 a.m.

They are looking for work.

They, along with 30 to 60 other men, gather at Delfino Place in the village waiting for an opportunity to work for one of the locals, and it doesn't matter what the job is: carpentry, painting, masonry, dry walling, plastering, gardening or just about anything.

ELUTERO DUARTE

They come here from Mexico, Central America and South America, and crossing the border from Mexico into the U.S. usually provokes an awareness of the "roads paved with gold." The division between the haves and the have-nots is blatant. Their countries are poor and the U.S. is rich.

Mexico, for example, is a nation of young people with almost half the population under 15 years of age, and almost half the population is unemployed or marginally employed.

But, there is one last hope: a job in "el norte."

Duarte is from Guatemala and has lived in the United States since 1988. He now lives in Carmel Valley and has always worked in construction.

Taken advantage

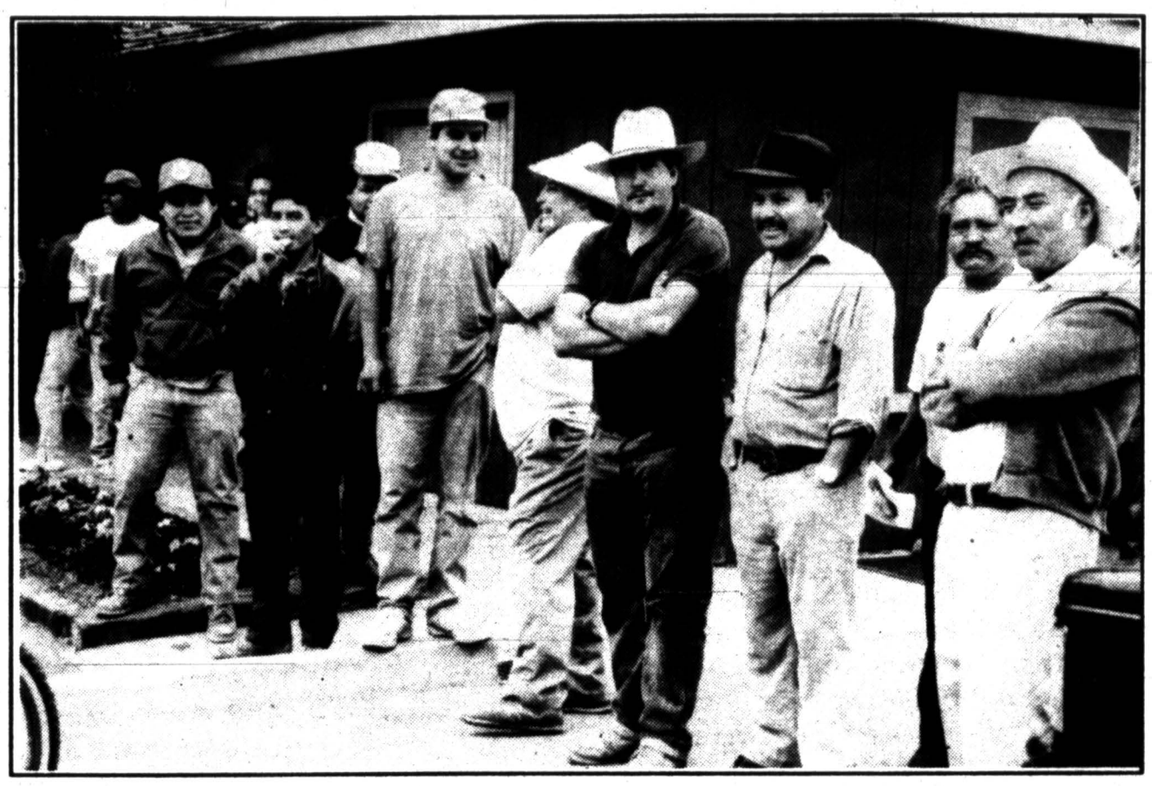
"I am lucky to get one day's work in a week, but when I do, the pay is good. All of the people we work for are very nice," said Duarte. "But now, I am thinking about going to Los Angeles to get a job there."

Unfortunately, Duarte was taken advantage of recently. He worked eight hours and never got paid.

"I worked all day gardening with no lunch. The guy told me he'd be back the next day to pay me. He didn't come back. Maybe he'll show up and pay me soon. If not, maybe I'll go to the labor commission."

Aldana, also from Guatemala, is a certified machine operator back home and has lived in the states for 12 years.

"Before, there were a lot of jobs in Carmel Valley, and I came here to make money for my future. When I first came here there were 60 to 70 guys looking for work every day, and usually you got about $50 or $60 for eight hours. Everybody treats us good. They give us a chance to survive. But for the past four months there is not as much work. Now everyone is starting to go other places. I might be going back to the city."



ELUTERO DUARTE, third from left, spends the long hours waiting for a job at Delfino Place in Carmel Valley village sharing experiences with other men who are also looking for a chance to work. (Susan Beck photos)

Those who have been fortunate enough to live in the states for any length of time have passed on the tales of their adventures to family and friends back home, and most of the men at Delfino Place agreed that part of the problem is that there are too many men looking for work.

Jose Louis Torres said that four years ago at Kasey's there were on the average about 15 laborers seeking work. "Everyone tells their family and friends about the work here, and they bring six more guys. We all do it. Now, instead of getting $12 a hour, we get $5 because of the competition."

Typically, one problem leads to another.

Gathering in the village for a chance to work has its down side, and one in particular is the lack of public restrooms. The Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee (CVVIC) has tried to address the situation but has been unable to provide a solution.

"It would be much better for us to have restrooms," said Torres. "We can use the community center bathroom after 7 a.m., but it's a long way to walk. We spend a lot of money at Kasey's, and we tried to talk with the owner about it, but nothing happened."

Futile endeavor

Peter Coakley, CVVIC chairman, said that in its efforts to provide a public restrooms near Kasey's committee members contacted local authorities and businesses to no avail.

"We tried to make it easy for the migrants and the businesses and talked with property owners at Delfino Place to find a site available for portable toilets. No one would have anything to do with it," said Coakley.

He added that after pursuing the situation for more than six months, CVVIC decided it was an exercise in futility. "We can't make it happen. The problem can't be solved."

Despite the problems, the men continue to arrive early at Delfino Place in hope of getting a day's work. The general thinking is that perhaps "manana" will be better.

Duarte, Aldana, and Torres agree that, "It's better to be here, with the chance that there will be work, than to go back home where there is nothing."

Carmel Greens hearing process won't be delayed

By SUSAN BECK

CARMEL GREENS' subdivision process will continue despite the fact that its developer, Thomas Gamboa, has pleaded no contest to securities fraud in San Mateo County.

Douglas Holland, county counsel, said that the pre-application hearings for 65 of the proposed 107-units of the subdivision along Carmel Valley Road cannot be held up based on any past or current problems taking place in another county.

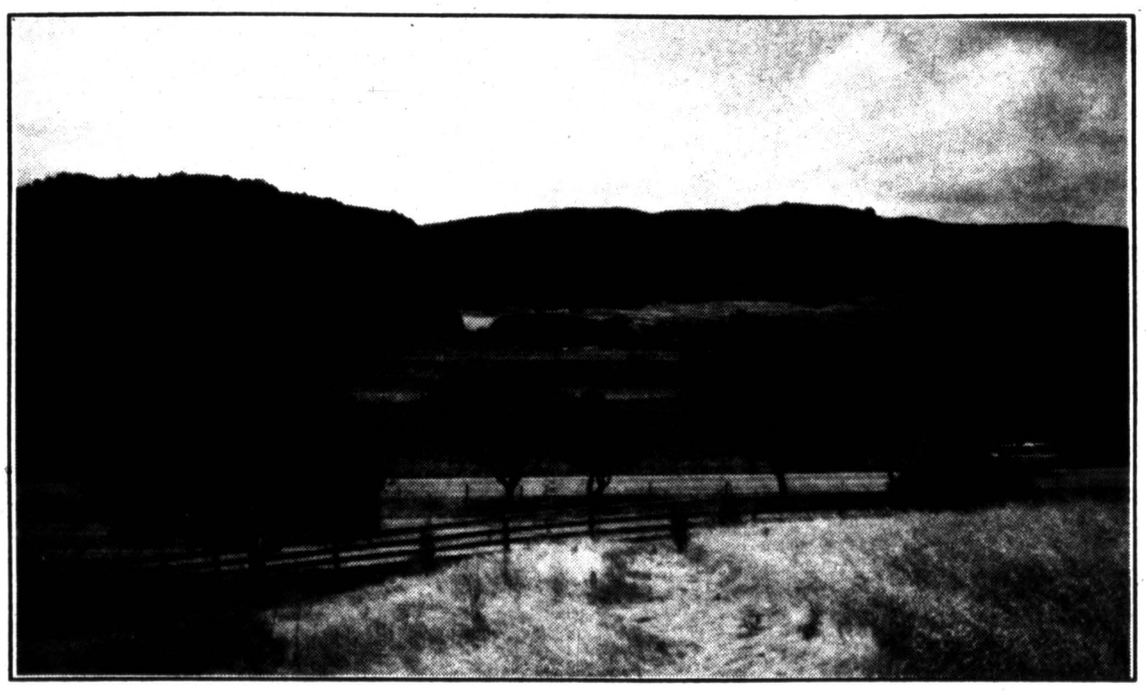
Gamboa faces six additional felony fraud charges unless $180,000 restitution plus eight percent interest is paid by Dec. 16 to the victims, who unwittingly gave him $60,000 each for down payments on land in the Hacienda Gardens subdivision in Half Moon Bay.

Consumer issues

"Gamboa's charges are consumer-related issues. None of them are land-use regulation issues," said Holland. "There may be certain things we can do to provide for some compliance for consumers later on."

However, Holland added that there is nothing that would stop Gamboa from following through with his subdivision in Carmel. "Obviously, we are going to pay close attention to his application to protect the county."

Patricia Bernardi, board member of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, said that she wasn't surprised about Gamboa's activities.



SYLVETTE BAIRD'S property faces the possible future site of Carmel Greens along Carmel Valley Road. (Sylvette Baird photo)

"He has a local history and has developed property in Carmel Valley before. About five years ago he advertised in several major publications to sell a development project even though he didn't have approval," said Bernardi. "Unfortunately, it looks like we will have a subdivision by someone who may not be financially responsible."

Neighbors in the surrounding community are equally disappointed that Gamboa may be building in the area.

Sylvette Baird owns four parcels on the north side of Carmel Valley Road across from the property site of the proposed Carmel Greens subdivision.

"I am against it. I knew all the time that he was a crook. I opposed the subdivision, and when he built the Riverwood condos there was an outcry. They were very cheaply built, the plumbing was wrong, it was a disgrace," said Baird.

"He wants to put a three-story building right on Carmel Valley Road above the Rancho Shopping Center. I've been fighting him all along. I don't want a ghetto over here. With his subdivision there will be 250 to 300 houses instead of 55, by my calculation."

Joyce Herman was recently appointed to the Subdivision Review Committee and is a member of the Arroyo Carmel Property Owners Association, which consists of residents living in the 91-unit condominiums on Rio Road.

"I hope that the news of Gamboa's dealings in San Mateo will provide the board (Monterey County Supervisors) with the impetus to view the next part of the proceedings more cautiously," said Herman.

CHAP hires an executive director

By SUSAN BECK

KATHLEEN TARP is the new executive director and fund-raiser for the California Horse Adoption and Protection Society (CHAPS).

She served as director of the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center for the past three years and will continue to do so until October.

"I want to fulfill my obligations to the center, but I will be starting part-time for CHAPS next week," said Tarp. "All my life I have wanted to work with animals and now I can. I'll be able to make a difference at a nationwide level to save lives from torture and abuse."

The first-ever executive director for CHAPS plans to broaden the base of appeal for fund-raising to include schools, corporations, and foundations. "My goal is the create public awareness through education so that we can prevent this tragic abuse of horses. Our primary objective is to rescue horses, give them tender loving care and adopt them out to good homes."

Debbie Tiernan, a founding member of the society and president of the board, said that Tarp was impressive.

"She has a great professional background, is well known and loved in Carmel Valley. We were very impressed with everything about her," said Tiernan. "I'm just thrilled. It's wonderful for us."

Tarp will be working with Bonnie Stoehn, coordinator for CHAPS, at Riley Ranch across from Point Lobos. Tiernan said that Ted Richter has donated the use of 10 acres at the ranch, which will accommodate 20 horses, donkeys, or ponies. For more information call 425-5209.

Cachagua firefighters are awarded grant

By SUSAN BECK

THE CACHAGUA Volunteer Fire Co. was awarded a grant of $13,986 from the Board of Directors of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Red Cross Chapter. Members of the Carmel and Carmel Valley Ambulance Fund Screening Committee unanimously agreed to make the award from the now defunct Carmel-Carmel Valley Ambulance Fund.

Chris Pentony, chief petitioner for the Cachagua volunteer firefighters, said the grant was submitted in June.

"This is the first money that we have received from grants in eight years. As a firefighter I am real excited. We can now make substantial improvements with our equipment," said Pentony.

Fire Captain Jaime del Valle said the money will really help a lot. "Our equipment is old and tired. We need to bring the equipment up to standard because it becomes a safety issue, and we will be buying portable radios and new pagers."

Women support coordinated planning

By Judy Higgerson
President of League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula

IN NOVEMBER, 1990, the League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula held a community workshop to present its findings regarding growth and development on the Monterey Peninsula.

The league presented results of a study of 41 pending and proposed projects on the Monterey Peninsula which showed that if all the projects were developed they would use a combined total of 1,700 acre feet more water per year and generate 101,100 additional trips per day. This finding reconfirmed the league's position supporting the need for a regional planning process for the Monterey Peninsula, given the lack of existing resources and infrastructure to support this development.

League encouraged

In February, 1991, the league was encouraged by several local government officials to work toward developing a community consensus in support of the development of a regional planning process. In March, 1991, the league began the process of forming a grassroots committee to address the need for greater coordinated and comprehensive planning.

The Ad Hoc Monterey Peninsula Regional Plan Committee, comprised of a broad base of public and private community interests, has worked for over a year to develop a consensus which is outlined in the statement of purpose and statement of issues. Based on this consensus, the committee recommends that it join in a partnership with the seven cities of the Monterey Peninsula and Monterey County to develop and implement a process for regional planning.

A joint committee would be comprised of 20 to 30 members with one-third from the private sector, one-third from the public sector and one-third from government, with each of the cities and the county appointing a representative.

The ad hoc committee believes a coordinated regional planning process is needed to address issues related to air quality, traffic congestion, public transportation, public safety, density and distribution of development, supply and use of resources such as water and open space, balanced economic and revenue development, job opportunities, and housing.

Past practices have evolved into a fragmented process involving a multitude of government agencies, which points to a need to establish a coordinated regional planning process to preserve the environmental integrity, economic viability and historical and cultural resources of the Monterey Peninsula.

Issues interrelated

Area-wide issues are interrelated and interdependent. To address one, others must be considered so that solutions reinforce and complement each other. Area-wide issues not only transcend local agency boundaries, in some instances they extend throughout the region.

Reuse and redevelopment of Fort Ord is a special challenge affecting all regional issues and require imaginative, comprehensive and integrated long-range planning. The committee sees this as a unique opportunity for a regional planning process requiring multi-jurisdiction cooperation at all levels of government and believes that if the Monterey Peninsula has a process in place when regional planning legislation is adopted, the peninsula may retain greater local control over its destiny.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

Emmy's new home

MANY OF you have had the pleasure of meeting Emmy, the precious snow-white kitty cat who has been the Cypress Inn's mascot for the past few months.

Emmy was found last fall on the doorstep of a Cypress Inn employee, and she was rescued from the SPCA when her owners failed to claim her. Her friends at the Cypress thought she would enjoy living at the Inn so Emmy took up residence and became our official guest greeter. I must say, she did a magnificent job and everyone who met Emmy was charmed by her sweetness.

Delicate digestive system

During the past couple of months, though, we've come to realize that living in a hotel, with all the hustle and bustle, may not have been the best choice for Emmy. After a lot of soul-searching, we decided that she might enjoy the peace and quiet of a real home with a real family. You see, Emmy has a delicate digestive system and she's prone to stomach upsets. A lot of people told us that there was too much activity in the hotel because more and more frequently we've been finding little reminders of her condition on the carpets, on the furniture, even on our guests' clothing!

I'm familiar with this problem because I've been through it with my own cats. Once they were thoroughly examined by my veterinarian, he reassured me there was nothing seriously wrong and they have little upsets like humans. Now, it's easy enough for me to clean that up at home, along with clumps of cat hair and hairballs. I don't even mind if my cats occasionally sharpen their claws on the furniture — I expect it because I don't believe in declawing. But a business establishment is another story and it all became a little difficult for the staff at the Cypress to handle.

We're all working very hard, searching for the perfect home for our Emmy. For the time being, she is in a wonderful foster home enjoying frequent visits from her pals at the Cypress. Emmy deserves nothing but the best and we will be sure she has just that.

See you next week!

(Written in collaboration with Judy Ruby, director, Doris Day Pet Foundation, Los Angeles).

When Readers Really Scream

Over the Fourth of July weekend, Ray March, editor of The Carmel Pine Cone in California, inadvertently left out the crossword puzzle.

Looking back, Ray wistfully remembers that some of the resulting phone calls were not really unpleasant, just indignant. Like all good editors he blames the lapse on "some inexplicable transition of type and page formatting." Even so, he moved fast to repair the damage.

In a shrewd mea culpa, Ray wiped out most of his front page the following week and filled it with the missing puzzle. And under the headline "We Apologize," he wrote, "May this never happen again."

In an editorial, Ray reminded the staff of his 77-year-old paper that they still had a thing or two to learn about their readers. "Caught in our own web," he wrote, "we forget at times that The Carmel Pine Cone is many things to many people: that it's not just the latest 'scoop' or late-breaking story that our readers are looking for. ... In addition to information — and hopefully enlightenment — our readers want entertainment, intellectual challenge, perhaps some simple diversions."

Dropping the puzzle, he concluded, "was a sharp reminder that while we are loved, it may be for something other than what we think."

Donald Teague

JACK LESTRADE laughs frequently when he talks about his friend Donald Teague.

Lestrade and Teague first met in Carmel Valley in 1974. Lestrade, a self-taught watercolorist from France, was wintering at the Blue Sky Lodge, sketching and visiting local galleries. He first saw Teague's work at the White Oak Gallery and commented to the gallery owner that of all the artists represented there he would most like to talk with Donald.

"The gallery owner called him up and he drove all the way out from Carmel to meet me. He didn't even know me," Lestrade says, still marveling at Teague's unpretentious interest in another artist.

From that impromptu meeting until Teague's death in 1991 the two men shared a private friendship of adventure, travel, stimulating conversation, camaraderie and art.

Teague and Lestrade regularly attended Tuesday lunches with other members of the creative community including photographer Steve Crouch, art director Gene Vance, Dick Lyon, journalist Ted Durein and cartoonist Eldon Dedini. As Teague got older his Tuesday outings were less frequent. Lestrade would visit him in his home and spent every evening with him until Teague's death in December of 1991. On Saturday nights they had oysters.

"Donald was a great human being. He was loved by many people," Lestrade says, adding, "but he should be remembered for his art. I believe eventually he will be regarded as one of the great American painters, another Winslow Homer."

Teague's achievements are recorded in the many awards he received. In his lifetime Teague was named an honorary Doctor of Arts degree by Pepperdine University, received a Gold Medal and Grand Prize from the American Watercolor Society, the Francis Murphy Memorial Prize and a Gold Medal from the National Academy of Design. He was twice honored with the Franklin Mint Gold Medal.

Donald Teague was a cultured, gracious man and probably the finest artist to live and work on the Monterey Peninsula during the last 30 years. Admittedly, he shunned publicity, choosing to pursue excellence quietly, which may account for the fact he has been so under-recognized in his own community.

At a retrospective exhibit at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art in 1988 he was relegated to a back-room section of the galleries but graciously greeted countless friends and collectors for hours in the summer heat. That same year, in ill health, he sat in a local gallery, signing hundreds of limited edition prints of his "Flamenco Dancers" as he chatted and joked with the gallery staff.

Lestrade thinks Teague's reputation first as an illustrator and later as western artist diminished his recognition outside of western art circles. "Donald was one of the few illustrators to make the switch from illustration to fine art. He was successful as an illustrator of the west, but he didn't really like it." Lestrade laughs his Charles Boyer laugh. "Western art limited him. Always a cowboy, a horse, a pretty girl. His best works are the paintings he did on his travels. There is hardly a place around the world he hadn't visited."

Characteristically understated, the Carmel Art Association has chosen to honor National Academician Teague with a special memorial exhibition of his works in conjunction with the association's 65th anniversary. The show will run from August 6 through September 1. Watercolors and oils from collections throughout the United States will be on display, but some of the finest works won't be there. Many Teague collectors chose not to risk shipping their irreplaceable paintings.

SWEET INSPIRATION

"We know it's kind of corny, but isn't romance and inspiration what this area is all about? Artists, writers and lovers were here before any Republican golfers," whispered a Highlands Inn staffer as a bagpiper in highland dress piped the earliest honeymoon couple into the Fireside Room. Assembled guests applauded as Mr. & Mrs. Robert G. Brown of Salinas, winners of Highlands Inn's nationwide search for the oldest honeymoon couple, cut the 75th anniversary cake in a ceremony honoring the cliffside retreat as a haven for artists, writers and world travelers.

MASON CASE, Natividad Medical Foundation board member, donated a $100 savings bond to Araceli Macias, the creator of the winning drawing which will be used as part of a holiday fund raiser.

The day before Richard Criley, a Carmel Highlands resident since 1917 and unofficial Highlands historian addressed a convivial luncheon group of honored members of the local art community that included artists and writers Gordon and Eleanor Newell, Muriel and Norman Foster, Will and Mary Shaw, Robert Campbell, Ric Masten, Billie Bolton, Owen Greenan, Sam Colburn and Keith Lindberg.

Greying heads nodded in agreement as Criley said, "When Frank Devendorf built Highlands Inn and developed this area in 1917 he was sensitive to the unique history and quality of this place. He encouraged writers and artists to settle here and made it possible for them to afford to buy property and build homes because he knew they would appreciate the area."

"Today Highlands Inn continues that tradition. Highlands Inn is an important part of our community. We all still come here to celebrate the special occasions in our lives and we want to thank Highlands Inn for keeping Frank Devendorf's dream alive.

"On with it! Let's keep it up."

ARTISTIC IRONIES

Some say J. Franklin Devendorf developed Highlands Inn to compete with S.F.B. Morse's Hotel Del Monte, but both men taught us a lesson many of today's land moguls and politicians seem to have forgotten. People make up a community, and it's important, especially in a community such as ours, to encourage new ideas, to attract people whose creativity will be stimulated by their surroundings. Wouldn't it be nice if we could once again offer attractive real estate deals to artists and writers to settle here? If we don't do something our cherished reputation as an artistic community will become a dim memory, replaced by what one local artist calls "garment industry art."

The menu at Highlands Inn 7Sth anniversary luncheon supposedly harkened back to early days, but one guest looked down at the Monterey Bay salmon with Castroville artichokes on his plate and said, "If these really were the old days, we would be eating abalone."

Jack Lestrade thinks Donald Teague's best paintings are the ones he did late in life when his eye sight was failing. "Donald didn't care for his paintings the last two years, he thought they were too abstract, but they read so well. He caught the essence of watercolor."

A recently received press release proclaims, "Rumors of the art market's death are greatly exaggerated. While a year ago market-watchers were waiting for the $100,000,000 painting, this year the same people were asking the question, 'Will art sell at all?'" Artists continue to create, even in a recession. In fact, some say economically depressed times spur creativity. Even so, speculators continue to wonder what to invest in next. Perhaps an art history class should be first.

People in hard times turn to their own talents to make ends meet. This year's Carmel Valley Fiesta participants include 100 crafts people who have discovered a creative outlet and a way to make money. The crafts booths are part of the two-day-long Fiesta, that includes two parades, a Saturday night street dance and food booths at the Carmel Valley Community Center in Carmel Valley Village.

Thirty local artists keeping the flame alive make up the cooperative group at Venture Art Gallery, located in the Doubletree Hotel across from the Plazatree Restaurant. Helen Ordway will the featured artist July 29 through Sept. 29. Gallery hours are 11:00 a.m. through 6:00 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday. Gallery phone: 3726279.

Don't know if they're artists or not, but the Pacific Grove Marine Rescue divers created a colorful fire-breathing dragon that shot steam out of its nose during this year's Lover's Point pageant at the "Feast of Lanterns." They added a new dimension to the traditional event that has been called a "wonderful low-budget, funk art celebration."

COWBOYS COMIN' TO TOWN

Celebrities sending RSVP's to the premiere of Clint Eastwood's new movie Unforgiven, include John Denver, Jonathan Winters, Chuck Norris, Doug McClure, Tom Selleck and Eastwood's young co-star, Jaimz Woolvette.

Big fish in a muddy pond

PISCES IS about the birth in water, as in oceans and depth and...waves. It can be as dark and mysterious as its ruler, Neptune. In this case, the Big Fish is Washington D. C and the Muddy Pond is the collective unconscious (Carl Jung talked about) stirred up now by T. Uranus and Neptune.

What do you suppose George Washington (a Pisces) had in mind when he chose Washington D. C. as the site for the nation's capitol? A Pisces city with a Cancer Moon (expressing the moods of the country) and appr opriately located on water (the Potomac River), born out of farmland and swamp (very Pisces) with a stellium in Pisces (Sun, Mercury and Mars). Did you know that after the stone-laying ceremony everyone got together in the local pub (again, Pisces)?

In esoteric astrology where Pisces is concerned, astrologers know that something "strange" is going on, that its spiritual values are being tested...

'Center of confusion'

Washington D.C. therefore, is and has been the "center of confusion", the seed of all sleazy goings-on (low-grade Pisces denial) unfocused and fraught with deception, dishonesty and lots of confusion. When will it work toward its spiritual destiny? My guess-estimate is when T. Saturn moves into Pisces on May 21, 1993 and officially by January 29, 1994. Right now D. C. has no structure to ground it.

Pisces, I have found, is a very powerful pattern affecting our country. Not only was George Washington a Pisces, but so was Andrew Jackson (when there was much conflict and social turmoil) and James Madison too was a Pisces. Remember Pisces Jim Wright who was forced to resign under suspicion of corruption, and who was supposed to be so highly principled and a peacemaker and what about Mayor Marion Barry (Pisces)?

So...here we are in the most powerful city on earth, ruled by Neptune which contains some of the worst slums (a negative Neptune) all within an eyeball view of the nation's capitol...and yet people here make decisions that affect all our lives day after day after day. Congress sits on the hill arguing its issues for haurs and days and nights on end, and why not with D.C.'s Mercury in Pisces, and Neptune's blindness to the problems in the outside world, insulated in its little illusionary island.

Hello...is anyone else aware that Alan Greenspan (also a Pisces) who is giving us political lullabies about the economy with his fairy tales and adventure stories to amuse rather than take us through troubled financial waters? Are yau aware he was once Charles Keating's financial consultant?

Cleansing agent

Neptune in its most embracing positive sense can be a cleansing agent. Isn't it time we got rid of corrupt government and put "spiritual ethics" in their place? Politics and spirituality, however, don't make an easy marriage. What's the solution... move the White House? Not a bad idea. Pisces certainly has not proved to be a good leader (Mikhail Gorbachev is an exception and he was booted out of the Soviet Union).

Don't you think its time to get past "fuzzy thinking" and invoke a new sensitivity with a need for some triple-Virgo action (opposite of Pisces) to help push away the shadows and cobwebs and to clarify and help transform the values associated with a national Neptune process? History has shown us quite clearly that political scandals seem never ending (Neptune has no boundaries unlike Saturn). Therefore, it wauld seem to me that D.C. has became a malignant tumor, a puss bag for the rest of the country and surgery (Virgo) is necessary. Pisces does not want to come down to earth with facts, nor does D.C.

The cycles of tides (Pisces) of economy are very much like the tides of the ocean (Neptune), and can no longer be ignored. Since 1791 everyone connected to each other in D.C. have supported each other in denial. Its social life has been lubricated by drugs and alcohol (Pisces-Neptune).

Next week...find out more about the "financial wave to come" before this year is out...and a higher expression of Pisces, courtesy of a Russian economist who died in exile in Siberia. Comments, want to make an appointment, call 624-2881 or write me: P.O. Box 223825, Carmel, California 93922.

BARBECUE AIDS FAMILY RESOURCE CENTER

The Rio Grill of Carmel and the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center are creating a special event on Sunday, Aug. 2, to benefit the Family Resource Center. The Rio Grill is preparing a gourmet barbecue — ringside — at the Pebble Beach Jumper Derby, the highlight of the 45th Annual Pebble Beach Summer Show.

Thirty riders — some who have ridden on past U.S. Olympic teams and others who will ride on future teams — will try to go over the 23-obstacle course. Ditches, banks, fences, water, brush, and gates are all incorporated by course designer Dave Ballard of Toronto, Canada.

"The Jumper Derby will be a very challenging course," says Tim Postel. Postel is the new proprietor of the Equestrian Center and producer of the event. "The fences will be about 4-feet-6 inches tall and there will be many interesting obstacles for each rider. The riders are timed, which adds to the excitement."

All proceeds from the benefit barbecue will go to the Family Resource Center. Tickets are $15 in advance and $20 at the door. Tickets can be purchased by calling 394-4622 or mailing a check to The Family Resource Center, 1178 Broadway, Seaside, CA 93955.

Consistently satisfying

A SERIES of hurricanes off the coast of Baja California has continued to deliver quality surf to the south and west-facing beaches along the Central Coast. Unfortunately, fog and prevailing northwesterly winds have made for miserable conditions locally. Best bet is early morning or late afternoon when the wind is lightest.

John Baker, manager of Bamboo Reef Dive Shop in New Monterey, reports good diving everywhere, particularly at Point Lobos and Monastery Beach.

Cannery Row has had visibilities of 20-25 feet, while diver's have seen visibilities approaching 50 feet outside of Whaler's Cove, according to Baker. The wind hasn't been a big factor, particularly for divers who get an early start.

A chartered dive aboard the Silver Prince is scheduled for August 26. For more information, call Bamboo Reef Dive Shop at 372-1685.

Local charter boat operators are still reporting excellent salmon fishing in Monterey Bay.

Following two slow days last week, Chris' Fishing Trips reports regular limits once again aboard the Checkmate and New Holiday. Fish are still small, ranging from 5-15 pounds.

John Lupo of Randy's Fishing Trips reports eight limits in the last 10 trips. The Sur Randy was in by 10 a.m. July 22, limiting out very quickly. The boats have been uncrowded, with only 12-16 people per trip. Fish are still deep, about 100 feet.

Lupo also reports consistent rock cod fishing on the reefs off Spanish Bay, Cypress Point, Carmel Bay, and the Highlands Inn, occasionally making the long trip to Point Sur for big ling cod.

FISHING THE thickest kelp beds can pay off big.

FAMILIES NEEDED TO HOST STUDENTS

Foreign high school students will be arriving soon into the Carmel area for homestay programs, and the sponsoring organization urgently needs a few more local host families.

According to Pacific Intercultural Exchange (P.I.E.) Executive Director John Doty, the students are all between the ages of 15 and 18 years, have their own spending money, are fully insured and are anxious to share their cultural experiences with their new American families.

P.I.E. currently has programs to match almost every family's needs, ranging in length from a semester to a full academic year, where the students attend local high schools.

Carmel area families interested in learning more about student exchange or arranging for a meeting may call P.I.E., toll-free, at 1-800-245-6232. The agency also has opportunities available for community volunteers.

MIGRANT WORKERS SEE AQUARIUM

The Monterey Bay Aquarium will offer free aquarium visits to migrant farm worker families in the Monterey Bay area, thanks to a grant from the Harden Foundation of Salinas.

The summer program includes free bus transportation to and from farm labor camps, free aquarium admission and a slide show and orientation program — in Spanish — when the families arrive.

The grant also pays the salary of an intern who coordinates the program.

The program will serve camps from the Pajaro Valley to King City, the Castroville Library and recreation centers in Salinas.

The grants total $24,750.

CRIME STOPPERS SEEKS BOARD MEMBERS

Volunteers are needed for the board of directors and the advisory board. They must be Monterey County residents who would be available for approximately two hours per week for one year or more.

Duties include setting program policy, promotion, determining reward amounts and raising funds.

If interested, send name, address and telephone number to Crime Stoppers of Monterey County Inc.; Box 821; Seaside, CA 93966.

Procrastination is my sin, much to my sorrow. But I am learning to deal with it – tomorrow.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Fortunate are the humble

IN THE 1950's General Bradley wrote a book, The Soldier's Story. He said, "Ours is a world of nuclear giants and ethical infants. We know more about war than we do about peace, more about killing than we know about living. We have grasped the mystery of the atom and rejected the sermon of the mount."

Here is a free translation of that sermon from the Paraphrased Bible: "One day as the crowds were gathering, he went up the hillside with his disciples and he sat down and taught them there. He told them, 'Humble men are very fortunate. The meek and lowly are fortunate for the whole wide world belongs to them. Happy are those who strive for peace. They should be called the sons of God.'"

Oh Lord, may we learn more about peace than war, more about living than killing. We really have not grasped the mystery of the atom and we do accept and we do not reject the sermon on the mount.

Finally, when Gilbert Keith Cheterton, a religious man and philosopher, was asked which books he would select if stranded on a desert island, he did not choose the Bible nor Aristotle nor St. Thomas Aquinas. He replied honestly, "Only one, James on practical shipbuilding."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

"Burnout" among families trying to care for an aging parent is blamed for a phenomenon that is of increasing to staffs of hospital emergency rooms. "Granny dumping" is the term they use when an elderly person is brought in on some pretext by wornout kin who then disappear, leaving the elderly person to be cared for by the hospital staff. In many cases, the family members return a few days later to pick up the elderly relative, having had a brief "vacation" away from their responsibility. According to a survey of hospitals by the American College of Emergency Physicians, the underlying reason is emotional burnout caused by trying to cope with jobs, the needs of their children, plus those of the elderly relatives.

Nuns in Show Biz:

Innocent fun or insult?

OUR AREA has a strong and deep Catholic heritage. The Monterey Diocese reports that 24,232 Catholics live on the peninsula – about 20 percent of the population. Almost every Catholic under the sun keeps vivid memories of Sisters who serve. Into this context of living faith came Nunsense — the musical comedy being staged by GroveMont Theater at its Monterey Playhouse.

GroveMont's history reflects high energy and good taste. Still, the subject's sensitivity called for care on our part. We assigned two clear-eyed reviewers rather than the usual one. If there were major differences of opinion, we felt, the chips would fall where they fell. The two attended on different nights.

John Dotson: poet, dean of faculty at Santa Catalina School, experienced producer, host of a weekly literary show over KAZU Public Radio. James Kinney: writer, singer, actor whose one-man show on Fr. Junipero Serra has entertained and educated thousands.

These critics always say what they mean and mean what they say. Let's see what happens—

By JAMES P. KINNEY

WE KIDS growing up Catholic in the '40s and '50s knew a lot about nuns. They taught us how to read and write, how to serve Mass and how to sing. (My early love for music was nurtured by warm-hearted Sister Gertrude, starting in the third grade.) They encouraged us to donate our nickels and dimes to support the starving overseas. They were an integral part of our growing up.

In the '60s and '70s there was a spate of books and plays portraying nuns as sadistic, sexually-repressed monsters dealing out physical abuse and force-feeding habits of guilt upon legions of cowering little papists. I never met such nuns.

With Nunsense, Dan Groggins' musical comedy now onstage at GroveMont's Monterey Playhouse, perhaps things have finally come full circle. Directed briskly by Stephen Moorer, with vocal direction by David Auerbach, choreography by Akemi Ito with tap coaching by Lucretia Butler, Nunsense is a light-hearted musical romp for five spirited and talented local actresses portraying nuns neither as pedestalled saints nor moralistic tyrants, but as we who knew them knew them — as unique, dedicated human beings.

CATHOLICS — GROWN up that way, raised in parochial schools, and carrying a lot of stuff about all that — have, perhaps, the greatest stake in the material of GroveMont Theater's production of Dan Goggin's musical comedy, Nunsense, playing through Aug. 16 at the Monterey Playhouse.

As I sat and began taking notes, the gentleman beside me asked, "What do you make of this? I've never seen anything like this before." And though not exactly sure where he was coming from, I imagined he had never seen a comedic frontal assault on religious icons that touch a lot of tender nerve endings. He stayed for the second act, so I suppose, if my theory is correct, there was nothing beyond his tolerance level in such numbers as the convent chorus line set to the lyrics, "On our way to heaven, we're here to raise some hell."

Comfy invitation

Actually, the audience was comfortably invited into the action prior to Act I when the "sisters" — in full habit though some shod in day-glo bright high-top Converse All-Stars — pass out bingo sheets and pencils. The semi-improvisational bingo game was punctuated by the sisters' clicking of clickers in their scapulars, by means of which to scold the audience into making the proper response to sisterly instruction: "Yes, sister." Most members of the audience complied with apparent pleasure, then agreeably offered their own biblical associations as the game processed from B-for Bethlehem 15 to I-for Immaculate-25, N-

GRITTY WESTERN — Yes, there's life after Carmel City Hall. Clint Eastwood's Unforgiven (see production photo above) will have its world premiere on Tuesday at Gallery 6 Cinemas in Del Monte Shopping Center. The Aug. 4 showing will benefit Monterey County Film Commission and Natividad Medical Center. It's said that Clint and such other celebrities as Tom Selleck will enjoy the barbecue, live music and film itself. Tickets cost $75 apiece. ANNUAL PARADE of the Caber will move along Carmel's Ocean Ave. on July 31 as a prelude to the 25th Scottish Festival and Highland Games. (See story this edition.)

Scottish Fest plans parade along Carmel's Ocean Ave.

CARMEL FIGURES prominently in the schedule put forth by organizers of the 25th annual Scottish Festival and Highland Games.

The colorful event mainly will occur Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 1-2, at Monterey fairgrounds.

Before that, however, at 3 p.m. Friday, July 31, there will be a program at Crossroads Shopping Center. This will feature the Vancouver Ladies Pipe Band, following their arrival from Canada.

And at 6 p.m. that evening, it was stated, the annual Parade of the Caber will move "down and up Carmel's Ocean Ave. to display the Ballantine Caber. This telephone pole-like object is tossed in a most exciting athletic contest."

The caber will be accompanied by the Vancouver Ladies Pipe Band, Scottish Society officers and members in full attire, clan members here for The Games "and an always-enthusiastic crowd of townfolk and tourists."

James Craig of Pebble Beach is Scottish Society president. The Games chairperson: Roderick Mackay from Del Rey Oaks. They and a committee from the membership are staging the activities, with proceeds given to charities including local agencies.

Rundown told

Craig and Mackay offered this rundown on the Silver Jubilee edition:

The hours both days will be 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. While there will be the usual bagpipers in pleated kilts, Scottish sports, dancing and music competitions, an added element occurs this year: the Irish will be honored all day Sunday.

First day, Scottish Highland Dancing contests will be on the Garden Stage. Competitors have signed on from all over the Western United States and Canada. (Sunday's contest will spotlight Irish step-dancing, judged at that same venue.)

Pipers, drummers and bagpipe bands will be playing for judges on another part of the field while Scottish athletics are watched and judged elsewhere. Female athletes will compete this year.

Planned for the main arena — six-a-side soccer, demonstrations of Border

The living line of Jay Campbell

By JOHN DETRO

WHEN JAY Campbell laughs, that Irish roar fills the room. And if Jay tells those tall and sometimes salty stories, his colorful approaches guarantee answering howls.

Jay's current art show — 15 oil enamel on canvas paintings in the Alvarado Lobby of Monterey Conference Center — demonstrates that the man and his art are one.

These pieces vibrate with humor and bright hues. His arrangements of Pop elements (trademarks, comic strip characters, broad punch lines, copied newsphotos, on and on) demonstrate more affection for the workaday world than Andy Warhol ever did.

Spend any bit of time within Jay's hyperkinetic universe and the blues will lift. Sit there for an hour or more and those wild surveys begin revealing the person who crafted them out of his broad experience (carnival shill, freight yard worker, cartoonist).

Jay Campbell, the pictures comment, is a lover and blue collar visionary who likely would go around the bend if he couldn't paint and draw. He sees so much that creativity becomes his defense as well as his abiding delight.

Jay Campbell as seen by Jay Campbell.

No witty primitive

Look closely, the pictures command, and you will see that Campbell may never be called a witty primitive. His compositional sense makes a good case for Buckminster Fuller's conclusion: there's really no randomness — only limited views of the one ongoing Process.

Jay makes lines that leap, twine, dance, remark upon their own passage. He has a living line — and that's probably the highest compliment any critic can make.

Behind the funny and affectionate paintings sit years of formal training (Boston's Vesper George Art School and Pratt Institute of Brooklyn) and practice. He's able to go beyond the rules and pursue utter joyousness simply because he worked so hard for so long.

It's all there on the lobby walls through Sept. 25. The show's presented by Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art with these co-sponsors: Colton Hall Museum, Cultural Arts Commission, City of Monterey.

WHITE CLOUD

Varied offerings: opera, piano night

PACIFIC GROVE'S Portofino Coffee House will present the opera Get Lost (Again) Columbus on Friday night, July 31.

Starting time — 8 p.m. Donation: $7 per person.

From the San Francisco Bay Area, White Cloud Wolfhawk Eagles said he wrote the music and libretto "in honor of the ancestors and for the sake of world peace." The cast includes Jennifer White Owl Jaguar and The Blood Road Singers (voices, drums) as well.

At 8 p.m. Saturday, August 1, San Francisco singer Judy Frankel will offer Songs of the Sephardim. Door charge: $7.

"The music of the Sephardic Jews spans more than five centuries," her program notes say — "from medieval Spain to Morocco, the Ottoman Empire and the Americas. The dual repertory includes Hebrew chant usually sung by men, relating to the liturgical calendar, and secular songs in Ladino (Judeo-Spanish) usually sung by women, relating to daily life and the life cycle."

Her concert venues include the Consulate General of Israel, Consulate General of Spain, Berkeley Jewish Music Festival, California Academy of Sciences, California Flamenco Society, UC/Berkeley. She has done numerous radio shown on both coasts.

RUSSIAN PIANIST Youri Pochtar will play his first Central Coast concert on Friday night, July 31, at Hidden Valley Music Seminars.

His appearance was arranged as part of the Carmel Valley center's Fridays At 8:00 Series. Tickets ($12.50 adults, $10 seniors, $8 students under 18) may be obtained at the door or through the reservations number — 659-3115.

Pochtar's program will include Schumann's Kreisleriana as well as Lizst's The Funeral Gondolas and Rachmaninov's Variations on a Theme of Corelli.

In 1983, this artist was Laureate winner of the Jose Iturbi competition in Spain and the Ettore Pozzoli conpetition of Italy. He has concertized widely throughout Europe and teaches at the Paris European Conservatory.

Proceeds will benefit the Hidden Valley youth programs.

Last weekend for no-cost Theaterfest delights

THERE'S JUST one more weekend to see GroveMont Theater's 1992 Monterey Bay Theaterfest — Aug. 1-2 at the Custom House Plaza and Memory Garden (near Fisherman's Wharf).

This closing period also will include the final Arts and Crafts Fair with more than 100 vendors displaying wildly varied goods. The Sukay troupe will present music of the Andes.

Admission is free to all productions: fractured fairy tales, a new historical comedy centering on Christopher Columbus, a Gilbert and Sullivan Pocket Opera, the tremendously popular Human Chess Game.

Also at no cost and in the Memory Garden: The Tempest by William Shakespeare (GroveMont's preferred spelling).

If you wish additional information, simply call show biz central at 649-0340.

Preservation group

"WOULD YOU like to help restore a peninsula landmark and create a showplace for the performing arts hereabouts?"

That question comes from Martin Schmidt, spokesperson for the State Theater Preservation Group.

Schmidt invites all interested parties to attend a general meeting of the organization at 10 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 1, in Monterey Conference Center.

"You'll see displays of historic photographs and other items showing some of the history of Monterey's State Theater," he says. "The group will discuss the progress we're making toward the restoration of this lavish 1926 entertainment palace, including the installation of a Wurlitzer theater pipe organ similar to the instrument which was in the theater originally."

Schmidt may be reached via 624-4695.

MPC opening

MPC THEATER Company's Man of La Mancha will open Thursday, Aug. 6, in the Main Stage Theater at Monterey Peninsula College.

After the opening night performance, the musical will be offered at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays — and 2 p.m. Sundays — through Aug. 30.

John Newkirk stars as Don Quixote while Vincente Salazar plays Sancho under the direction and choreography of John Pasqualetti. The cast includes Felecia Stevenson as Aldonza, Ron Cohen as The Innkeeper, Mitchell Davis as Dr. Carrasco, Artemis Ledesma as The Housekeeper, Ron Nelson as The Padre and Suzi Burns as Antonia.

D. Thomas Beck designed the sets and lighting. Constance Gamiere designed the costumes. Musical director: Barnie Hulse.

A $5-per-seat preview performance will go on the boards at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 5. Tickets for other performances cost $15 general, $11 (students, seniors, military) and $7 for children 12 years of age and younger.

Reservations and $11 advance tickets may be arranged through Monterey County Theater Alliance at 655-3200 or the MPC Box Office at 646-4213.

Sunday fun

SONGS WILL fill the air on Sunday afternoon as the no-cost Summer Concert Series continues at Forest Theater (8/2). Start time — 2 p.m.

Performing music "especially for young children and their families" will be Mary Lee Sunseri and Nancy Stewart.

They promise "pop standards, fun tunes, action songs, silly songs and a sprinkling of lullabies."

Collies herding sheep and geese, tug-of-war matches. Along the grassy fairway will be more than 40 clan tents from which representatives of Scottish, Irish and Welsh families will hand out information on Celtic culture and genealogies.

Much variety

"Entertainment will be constant," Craig said — noted Scottish singers, fiddlers, country dancers, Irish entertainers, a dart tournament, authentically-attired historical groups practicing 18th century military drills (with muskets).

"You know," he added, "the Ladies Pipe Band will be featured at the fairgrounds too. The 20 members have won prizes at international contests and starred in the famed Festival Tattoo in Edinbirgh."

Saturday: drum major contest finals, tug-of-war, 60-piece Watsonville Band, massed bagpipe bands in the traditional climax, presentation of trophies.

Saturday night there will be a formal Jubilee Ball dinner-dance at Pebble Beach's Spanish Bay Inn. Reservations are required. Linda McKee (659-5579) will answer questions about this part.

Carmel Middle School

Same evening, Scottish Country Dancers will hold a dance party at Carmel Middle School starting at 8 p.m.

Advance discount tickets will be available at several peninsula outlets (to be announced). Tickets will be sold at the fairgrounds gates both days.

Two-day general admission tickets are $15 or $12 for students, military, seniors. One-day general admission is $9 or $7. No cost to children ages six and under.

Children's Experimental Theatre approaches 33rd year

By TARA NUTTER

COMING UP is the 33rd year of the peninsula's own Children's Experimental Theatre. Thirty-three years of teaching, producing, performing and touring will continue uninterrupted this September when classes register for the '92-'93 season. Students 6 to 18 years of age, under the skilled staff of CET, will explore all aspects of theater.

For more than 30 years the craft of theater has been emphasized at CET. The weekly classes focus on speech, movement, improvisation, period work, combat and pantomime. Each class performs separately in the spring. The Traveling Troupe mixes several classes in multiple casts and tours from January to June. This troupe reaches 25,000 youngsters free of charge each year during the school day.

At center

This hectic schedule centers around the founder of CET, Marcia Gambrell Hovick (a graduate of Mills College) who acts as teacher, playwright, actress and director. After operating CET for two years alone, Mrs. Hovick was joined by Loel B. Shuler. She became assistant director, actress and consummate costumer. Since all CET productions are set in historical period (to further the understanding of history) Mrs. Shuler's inspired costumes greatly enrich the program. There are also one or more teaching assistants, technical directors and a combat instructor who fulfill the demands of this unusual school.

CET never requires auditions. Talent is latent or already visible in all youngsters. A blend of shy, observant, lively and self confident young actors soon learn to create together as well as separately in this most cooperative art form.

Classical productions

The primary fundraising activity to benefit CET has been the classical productions put on by the Staff Players Repertory Company.

This year's season beginning October and ending in May will produce five plays. The SPRC, a 21-year-old institution, will begin auditions for the first three plays of the season in mid-August. New performers are always welcome.

For more information about this unique Peninsula institution call 624-1531.

ANNIE'S BOOK STOP

"It was love at first sight," Jennora Grieman says of when she met 35-year husband John. "We were married about three months after we met in Monterey."

The book-loving pair built Annie's Book Stop with the same sense of joy. Warm, bright, cheery. Deep carpeting that you can sit on while browsing. The special children's area with books and play space.

And 15,000 pre-read paperbacks in 40 categories. Every title is about half the original price.

Best sellers, coffee table formats. You can't go wrong at Annie's. "Today's books at yesterday's prices," John says with a smile. "That's more than a slogan – we really like the folks who come in because they like to read." 1760 Fremont (Olympia Plaza), Seaside. Phone: 394-1452.

CARMEL BOOK EMPORIUM

This fine bookshop emphasizes high quality and 60 sections (ultimately 100) and a big stone fireplace round which folks may browse contentedly. Management promises computerized ordering that assures "the best possible turnaround time."

Special attention is given to mysteries, creative writing, the lively arts - and of course the tops in contemporary fiction. Videos include such special contexts as Oscar-winning Best Pictures over the past 20 years. And PBS productions. And music tapes and CDs (local players too). Before long, Carmel Book Emporium will add a cafe - perfect meeting spot.

On Lobos Lane in The Crossroads (a few steps from Safeway). Open 10-6 Sunday/Thursday; 10-8 Friday/Saturday. 626-BOOK.

MONTEREY BAY COFFEEHOUSE BOOKSHOP

Opened by Estelle Cimino in November 1991, this downtown spot (472 Alvarado St.) has an airy and bright atmosphere that seems made for book lovers. "I've had a passion for books ever since I was a child," Estelle comments. Her caring can be seen in the full children's section, Arts, Self-Help, Business, Spirituality .....dozens of well-stocked categories. And the audio department delights with best-sellers read by excellent performers. "I really believe people come into a bookstore on a quest," she continues. "It's gratifying to be able to help our customers find the treasures they are seeking." The comfy coffee shop serves light lunches and desserts in addition to a fine array of espresso drinks. For-sale music CD's and cassettes provide a soothing and relaxing background. Computerized ordering. Magazines galore. Ample parking in rear lot. Hours: 9-10 Monday-Thursday; 9-10:30 Friday, Saturday. And 10-8 Sunday. 647-1822.

By RAY A. MARCH

Among the Cypress — The Monterey Peninsula. Photography by Gary Geiger; text by Douglas Long. Graphic Arts Center Publishing Co., Portland, Oregon. 152 pages. $32.50.

JUST WHEN you think you've seen'em all, along comes Among the Cypress — a refreshing and different coffee table book about the Monterey Peninsula. Keepers of this book will find it, containing photography by Carmel resident Gary Geiger and text by Douglas Long, a welcome addition to the growing selection of works on the area.

The challenge in producing a four-color book about the Monterey Peninsula is in finding a different avenue, a departure from what has already been done, and Geiger's photography has successfully accomplished that. Among the Cypress is an intricate photo story about where we live. It especially details the peninsula's scenic values, its architectural uniqueness and its ethereal feeling.

There is defintely a photographic sense of place in Among the Cypress. The book is structured by sections devoted to Carmel, Monterey, Pacific Grove, Carmel Valley, Big Sur, Pebble Beach and Point Lobos, with an historical overview. There are scenes no photographer has been able to resist, such as the Big Sur coastline near Palo Colorado, the Santa Lucias dropping into a thick fog bank and a couple of routine aerials, but Geiger is forgiven. His interpretations, for the most part, reflect a fresh eye.

True insight

Geiger's photos of Point Lobos are among his strongest, and he reveals a particular affinity for cypress trees, for which the book is titled. He has also captured scenes only a longtime resident might discover and enjoy — such as his wonderful photos of a Garland Park path and a tiger cat on a Gosby House wicker sofa. There's even a photo celebrating poison oak.

If there is anything out of place in this collection of photographs it is the Monterey Bay Aquarium-supplied photos. We wonder why they were included.

The writing is informative, but unfortunately loose. At no point does Long seem to grasp the essence of the photography he accompanies and supposedly should complement.

While Long offers some insights into what makes the Monterey Peninsula tick, he fails to capture the same sense of place that Geiger has illustrated in his photos. In short, the text is not written with authority.

Overall, however, Among the Cypress is a worthy companion to anyone's collection of books on the Monterey Peninsula.

The cover of the book discussed above: Among the Cypress by Geiger and Long.

Art roundup: Carl Cherry Center opens varied exhibit

THE PUBLIC is invited as Carmel's Carl Cherry Center for the Arts kicks off a new exhibit with a two-hour reception at 4 p.m. on Saturday (8/1).

That time slot also will contain a "memorial birthday party" for the late Carl Cherry. The new show features work by Aris Demetrios, Kathleen Olson, the late Jeanne D'Orge.

Grants helped

The exhibition will run through Aug. 28. Helping such presentations over there are grants from Monterey County Cultural Council, City of Carmel, McMahan Foundation.

Public sculptures and fountains by Demetrios may be seen throughout the country — the bronze fountain, for one example, on Monterey Bay Aquarium's deck. Pieces in bronze, copper, steel and aluminum have been commissioned by Stanford University, San Francisco City College, Jack London Square (Oakland) and San Francisco Wine Museum.

He brought three garden sculptures from his San Francisco studio to Cherry Center earlier this month. For the August show, these will be joined by "a number of interior sculptures."

Kathleen Olson of Carmel Valley was staff photographer at Monterey Bay Aquarium for five years and a successful freelancer into major national markets. Her black/white photos at Cherry Center are links to a journey through Japan, China and Thailand.

Her response

"She currently is studying computerized digital photography," Cherry spokespersons say — "her response to the challenge of an injury which left her unable to chance the physical risks of a career in photojournalism."

Jeanne (D'Orge) Cherry was a respected Carmel poet and prolific artist. In 1948 she began the Carl Cherry Foundation — now the Cherry Center — in honor of her second husband. From the nearly 1,000 paintings and drawings in the Cherry Center archive, Director Robert Reese has picked a group to replace the D'Orge works shown in July.

Nelson exhibit

AN INTERNATIONAL reputation precedes Walter Nelson. The photo exhibition bearing his name will open Friday evening, July 31, at the Center for Photographic Art in the Sunset Complex.

The opening reception will happen from 6:30-8 p.m. Then he will give a free slide lecture at Sunset's Bingham Room. (The show itself — Beyond the Photograph, Beyond the Painting — will stay up through Sept. 11.)

It was in 1981 that Nelson began combining vivid color photographs with painting and sculpture into a single plane of color and texture. "His mastery," says Diane Hanek of the Center, "transforms photographic images into a strong painterly expression where at a distance one cannot decipher the difference between photography and painting."

Included in the Carmel exhibition will be his new portfolio — Dreamtime — which portrays aboriginal symbolism. Monterey County Cultural Council sponsors this show too.

Santa Fe, Taos

CARMEL FOUNDATION announces its Artist of the Month for August: Delores Kaller.

Spokesperson Ellen Castle says Kaller's color photos of Santa Fe and Taos will be shown at the foundation's Hallway Gallery (Eighth and Lincoln). Hours are 9-5 weekdays and 1-4 over weekends.

Demonstrations

CARMEL ART Institute's latest series of art demonstrations at Flanders Mansion commences Saturday (8/1). They'll be at 10 a.m. (Will Bullas — watercolor) and 2 p.m. (Michie Long — oil).

The per-demonstration cost is $5 (or $30 for the whole series). For further information, call 626-8618.

Andreason reception

HIGHLANDS SCULPTURE Gallery (Dolores between Fifth and Sixth in Carmel) plans a reception from 4-7 p.m. Tuesday (8/4) for Sharon Andreason. Her recent work will be shown there Aug. 1-31.

Andreason's sculpted horses and female forms have been shown from Madrid to Seattle, San Francisco and of course Carmel. She and her husband (media executive Stoddard Johnson) are community activists who have four children and live in Pebble Beach.

Fascinating items

FUTURE FILE: The Stefan Mann shop of Carmel (Dolores between Fifth and Sixth) will have a special visitor on Aug. 29-30. Showing up that Saturday and Sunday will be East Coast artist Joshua Maresca, who weaves distinctive Nantucket Lightship baskets.

He decorates the tops of his baskets with scrimshaw whales, dolphins, gulls, roses. These are mounted on a contrasting wooden base. On the bottoms, he prefers red or white oak or cherry wood.

Learned from Indians

Maresca's advance packet says Nantucket Lightship baskets date back to the Algonquin Indians. The early settlers of Nantucket learned basic basketry from them. In the 19th century, lonely sailors who tended lightships off the New England coast took up this handiwork to help fill their long stretches at sea.

"These thightly-woven baskets are almost indestructible and will last for generations," he says. "Each basket I make is different. I'll custom-make various sizes, including small evening bags."

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

Changes

THE CONVERSION of eclectic KAZU Public Radio to strip format on Aug. 3 (certain musical genres in fixed daily time slots) also creates some openings for volunteer broadcasters.

Program Director Peter Williams says he'll welcome calls from folks interested in doing "older jazz programming — Ellington, the West Coast sound, lots of vocals — and blues shows." His number: 375-7275.

When we chatted last week about the big switch, Williams said he would talk one-on-one with present KAZU broadcasters about if they could commit to new hours. "We don't want to get rid of people," he added. "This (change) is to help the station grow. The variable will be whether they can adjust their (personal) schedules."

The new approach was in the works — on the paid executive staff level — long before Peter came into the scene from KJAZ Radio. He has put a good face on a difficult situation, even showing up unannounced and uninvited at a meeting called by dissident on-air people. I respect his guts and willingness to be interviewed, but still must put forth some points:

• KAZU listeners have favorite broadcasters. Many contribute money to specific shows.

If my favorites were bumped out the door — and one almost quit over the format hassles — I'd jump and shout. Other station faithfuls should do the same. Dissidents recommended a poll of the listenership on the strips and their implications, but this never happened. If the switch causes financial problems, the station will have no right to ask those same listeners to make up losses.

• Once the decision was made and no matter how many meetings were held to valve off anger, the switch felt inevitable. KAZU's federal charter calls the place a public outlet and public money is the basic fuel. Executive thought, on this one matter, has seemed private and corporate. KAZU simply ain't staff property and any confusion around that point will sooner or later cause big trouble.

In short, the station can't have it both ways.

• If KAZU listeners care to comment on the situation, this column will run those views. Happily.

OVER AT Portofino Coffee House in Pacific Grove, Barbara Murphy announces an August entertainment schedule that's unusually heavy on the jazz side. The keystone, of course, is the Joseph Lucido Band with those no-cost Sunday evening sessions. Otherwise:

• Thursday (8/6) — Zytron. Here's the quintet fronted by master drummer James Zitro from Santa Cruz. Plus localite John Cortes (saxophones), our own Kenny Stahl (flutes), Murray Low (piano), Frank Passantino (bass). Eight o'clock kick; $6 (solo) or $10 (couple). Between them, these real pros have worked with scores ofjazz giants.

• Monday (8/10) — Tough young pianist Eddie Mendenhall leading a group of similarly youthful players (drummer Smith Dobson Jr. included). A chance to check out the next regional jazz generation. Only $3 per. Same start time.

• Thursday (8/13) — Guitarist Peppino d'Agostino. Jazz, World Music, Hispanic Romanticism. This wizard can play anything he likes within a given set. Eight o'clock and $8 per.

• Thursday (8/27) — Acoustic trio jazz with bassist Bryan McConnell, tenorman Les Rose, Johnny Goldsmith on drums. They'll play compositions by Mingus, Miles, Wayne Shorter. Same start time and $5 apiece.

BUSY PRODUCER Richard Armbrust says internal binds have forced cancellation of his Aug. 7 concert at the Monterey Marriott. On that bill were Brazilian vocalist Claudia Villela, brilliant East Coast bassist Harvie Swartz, keyboardist Weber Drummond and Celso Alberty (drums).

But. Weber Drummond's Zen Blend will feature Claudia when those peninsula musicians play Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz on Friday night (7/31). Other bandsmen: Joseph Lucido (guitar), Dennis Murphy (electric bass), Pat Tregenza (drums), Kenny Stahl, Brian Stock (flugelhorn).

They'll perform compositions by Weber. Eight o'clock; tickets ($5 per) at the door only.

No Monday night show at Kuumbwa on Aug. 3. Aug. 10 — Wayne Henderson's Next Crusade with Wilton Felder. Trombonist Henderson and tenorman Felder were part of the original Jazz Crusaders with Joe Sample and Stix Hooper. Sets at 7:30 and 9:30; $14 advance (Ticketmaster) or $16 at the door.

BLUES NEWS: The free concert coming up at Laguna Grande Park on Saturday (8/1) will be a stone treat for blues buffs. From 1-4 that afternoon, the gathered faithful can hear the local Broadway Blues Band and the Johnny Heartsman Band.

From Sacramento, Heartsman plays guitar, piano, organ and flute. On the latter, he takes the fairly rare and extremely haunting tack from the Sea Islands of the Deep South — humming while he blows. Beauty and power with your taste of that heritage.

The fine series is sponsored by City of Seaside, Monterey Bay Blues Festival, Radio Pacific. Take a picnic basket and kick back. The children are more than welcome — they're enjoyed by all.

The coalition also agreed to help find a new sponsor, I'm told.)*

NOT FORGOTTEN: July 25 was the birth anniversary of the late jazz vocalist Carol Mildon, who grew up here before San Francisco and then Las Vegas called. My new book, completed in February and now making the rounds, has this lovely human being as its center. Amen.

Our critic at the Bach Festival: recitals in the spotlight

Recital overview (7/24)

Saturday piano recital (7/25)

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

I HAVE always felt that the Carmel Bach Festival afternoon recitals, which begin at 2:30 in Sunset Auditorium and last approximately an hour, are a best buy, musically speaking. To expand on this vein of thinking, here is my day-by-day choice of the programs' highlights.

Monday, two of J.S. Bach's sons won out over their father and Henry Purcell. Johann Christian Bach's "Concerto for Harp and Basso Continuo" Op. 1, No. 6 (1763) was replete with freshness and Italianate charm. Harpist Daniel Levitan was an authoritative soloist, playing with animation and virtuoso flair. The Andante had a delicate Elysian melody outlined gracefully by the harp over a pizzicato accompaniment. The "Theme and Variations on God Save the Queen" of the third movement was performed with dextrous accuracy, and the cadenza summed everything up very stylishly.

Wilhelm Friedemann Bach's "Trio Sonata for Two Flutes and Continuo in D" with Damian Bursill-Hall and Robin Carlson was an appealing bird-song-like, skillfully trilled instrumental musical entertainment.

Tuesday was more complicated. There was a wealth of interesting, well chosen music and, as a result, a lot more to like. Most unusual, most intriguing and most beautifully performed, was Joseph-Hector Fiocco's "Lamentatione Secunda" as sung by mezzo soprano Lynda Madej. Her lovely warm sound filled the hall and her vocal agility and interpretive understanding was colorful and exciting. Her accompanists, Phebe Craig, harpsichord and Michael Sand, viola da Gamba, were equally skillful and sympathetic.

A C.P.E. Bach "Sonata for Two Violins" was another polished offering played by Laura Kobayashi and Deanna Lee. Two sonatas for Baroque violin by Dario Castello were well expounded by Michael Sands and the "Sunrise" Quartet Op. 76, No. 4 by Haydn was played with polished professionalism by Laura Kobayashi and Deanna Lee, violins, Simon Oswell, viola and Paul Rhodes, cello.

On Wednesday, the pick was easy. Lenuta Atanasiu and J.S. Bach's "Partita No. 2 for Solo Violin" were head and shoulders above the competition even though there were several very "gemütlich" offerings. Put Ms. Atanasiu and her violin on stage alone and magic music making results. The Allemande, Courante, Sarabande and Gigue were alive and fluent. The tone is notable and the fingers are fleet, but in the Chaconne the playing had a nobility and direction that at the conclusion, brought the audience to its feet cheering.

Delightful quartet

A delightful oboe quartet by J. C. Bach and a Sextet for winds and strings by Bach's grandson Wilhelm F. E. Bach (both gentlemen approximate contemporaries of Mozart) were pleasant, entertaining and very well played by members of the Festival Orchestra.

Thursday was multiple musicians day. The choice of music ran to the largest concentration of Festival musicians to grace an afternoon recital program. It began and ended with George Philipp Telemann, the composer whom the good burghers, the Town Council of Leipzig, would have preferred to J.S. Bach.

Telemann's legendary compositional facility was amply demonstrated in these two works. The "Concerto for Four Solo Violins in C Major" with its bright, chattery Allegro, Vivaldian raindrop Largo and busy Allegro was very well done. It was one of the better recital opening numbers. The closing work a "Concerto for Three Violins and Three Oboes" plus harpsichord and bassoon, was played with verve and sparkle. The contrasts in the instrumental sound and the fine playing underlined the fact that these hard to program musical oddities can only be explored at a festival. After all, we also got a "Concerto for Four Bassoons" (Michel Corrette) and a "Sonata for Two Harpsichords" by W. F. Bach as well. What a nice grab bag it was.

Friday's program had three winners and if baritone Daniel Lichti's fine traversal of the Bach cantata "Ich habe genüg" (which, in fact, was heard the night before) were added to it, it absolutely would have made a far more worthy and satisfactory Thursday night concert than the brief, rather feeble one that was offered.

Sterling exponent

Violinist Lenuta Atanasiu was the sterling exponent of the "Partita No. 3 for Solo Violin" by Bach. She was an authoritative and assured executant who, at the same time, was sensitive and eloquent.

The Boccherini "Quintet in D Major" Op. 37 No. 2 was aired by yet another accomplished group drawn from the orchestral string section. The music had freshness and much Italianate melodic appeal. Violinist Beni Shinohara and cellist David Starkweather played their many almost operatic duets with skill and polish. Another rarely programmed work, the Beethoven "Sextet for Winds"

Op. 71 concluded the program. It is almost impossible to get such an instrumental group together live, but there we had them and it was a most pleasurable musical event. There were duets here too, but between Eli Eban, clarinet, and Jesse Read, bassoon, in warm rounded tone and technical superiority. The ensemble was excellent and the net result was completely fulfilling.

IN TURNING my critical thoughts to a consideration of the Saturday morning recital and the appearance of Janina Fialkowska in what is easily the climax of this fine series of events, I realize this is going to be yet another of my paeans of praise in honor of this extraordinary pianist.

Her back-to-back appearances, last night as soloist with the orchestra and this morning's remarkable concert, again provided more proof of her pianistic superiority of talent and ability and, incidentally, her physical endurance.

The program began with the "Andante and Variations in F Minor" by Haydn. The artist played with pristine clarity. Her touch was sensitive and the musical flow was gracefully structured. Finely drawn trills were delicately sounded and the more ornate passages were given in a fine legato line. The tempos were spacious and tastefully conceived.

The Beethoven "Sonata No. 4 in E Flat Major" Op. 7 is an early work, but already seems to forecast the later maturity of the composer. Ms. Fialkowska brought an earthier and more colorful, almost romantic, approach to this music which was composed only four years after the very classical Haydn work.

There were strong contrasts of moods and dynamics, as well as drama and tension in the fast moving first movement. The Largo began with quiet nobility and sang with finely etched dynamic colors. Yet at times, there was a symphonic quality to the sound.

The Scherzo-like third movement had grace and playful accents bracketing a stormy and dramatically contrasted Trio. The Rondo's singing theme was lovingly set forth and a wealth of elaborate trills and figures were detailed to perfection. It was a completely captivating interpretation.

Cesar Franck's "Prelude, Choral and Fugue" is a dark and dramatic pianistic blockbuster. A product of his later years (composed almost 100 years after the rest of the program) it makes enormous demands on the maturity and virtuosity of its performer. In fact it almost exhausts the pianist's resources, so stringently are they utilized.

Fialkowska's projection of the many and wide ranging facets of the music was one of sheer brilliance but it had darker, more introspective hues as well. The virtuoso waves of notes and tones, the strength, stamina and tremendous technical resources she has at her command were incorporated into a totally convincing conception of this towering masterpiece.

The delightful encore, based on the premise that without Mendelssohn's proselytizing we would not have rediscovered Bach, was the "Spinning Song" by Mendelssohn. This after a cheering, long lasting standing ovation from a full house.

Nuns sing and dance in GroveMont offering

James Kinney review...

ranks were decimated when a batch of vichyssoise soup served up by Sister Julia Child of God, the Order's culinary expert, contained botulism.

Before the festivities begin, the audience (a full Friday night house) was treated to a game of bingo supervised by the fully-habited nuns, using their "crickets" (do they still make those things?) to hold attention and awarding winners prizes, invariably glow-in-the-dark rosaries. (I have a priest friend in the Archdiocese of L.A. who actually refers to his resident parish as "Our Lady of Perpetual Bingo"!)

Then portly Mother Superior Mary Regina (Rosanna Yadegari), flanked by her four co-performers, proceeds to put on an often hilarious, occasionally moving musical revue.

Highlights

Believe me, these nuns can sing and dance! With over 30 numbers extending over two fast-paced acts, space allows me to mention only a few highlights. Light on her feet and only mock-stern, Sister Superior tells what it's like "Taking Responsibility" and in "A Word from the Reverend Mother."

Sister Mary Hubert (Amy Washburn) describes "Baking with the BVM" (Blessed Virgin Mary for you Prods) and busts out with a trumpeting bible-hymn, "Holier Than Thou." This lady can belt!

Slightly dingy Sister Robert Anne (Jeanne Wooster), wearing high-top red Converses as part of her habit) opens Act II with an endearing rendition of "Robert to the Rescue" and captures the audience with the zippy, "I Just Want to be a Star."

Wylde moves

Sister Mary Amnesia (Eleanor Wylde), the slightly confused one, tells us how in "So You Want to be a Nun" and her wistful, "I Could've Gone to Nashville."

And, finally, the young novice nun, Sister Mary Leo (Jessica Ann Stevenson) leads the others in her clear, clean soprano in the beautiful "Benedicite," (capturing that unique sound I vividly remember after so many years of nuns' singing unison in a dark chapel on cold winter mornings back in our Ohio seminary) and leads us on a melodic dancing spree in "The Drive In."

"Nunsense is Habit-Forming" sings the finale. It was for a lot of us. I can think of three things nuns taught us I'll never forget: 1) Tell the Truth. 2) Don't be deliberately cruel to another living creature. 3) Don't think yourself superior because of your possessions. Many of our national "leaders" could have greatly benefitted from such sound nunsense.

Here, Nunsense is just great musical fun, with a trip down memory lane for some of us. Musical back-up is by "The Holy Rollers," also dressed in full habit: Barbara Souza on piano, Rob Fitzgerald (who let him into the convent?!) on drums and percussion.

for Nazareth-43, Be One for B-1, and O-for Omniscient-64. Winners were brought on-stage to receive "luminous-rosary" or "Virgin-Mary-and-Jesus-keychain" rewards.

As the story unfolded, we learned that this musical review and variety show was hatched by the "Order of the Little Sisters of Hoboken" or, "Little Hobos," to raise funds for burying four deceased members of their community. In fact, they have already buried 48 sisters after the mass bouillabaisse catastrophe which took their lives. Burial funds ran out because of a premature decision by Mother Mary Regina to buy the Betamax.

Loose seams

The premise is, yes, rather flimsy, and much of the script, as befits much musical comedy, is rather loosely stitched. But the bottom line is laughs, such as those brought by "recipes for the Catholic kitchen" and the song "Baking with the BVM (Blessed Virgin Mary)" and references to the "Salad Saint John the Baptist: one head of iceberg lettuce"; "Mary Magdalene Tarts;" "Host Toasties Hors d'oeuvres for the Last Supper: serves 13."

This rather visceral material was presented with panache by the ensemble cast adroitly directed by Stephen Moorer, GroveMont's Executive/Artistic Director. Voices were strong and ably elicited by vocal director David Auerbach. Choreography by Akemi Ito and tap choreography by Lucretia Butler presented welcome episodes of vivacious movement throughout the evening.

Rosanna Yadegari brought fully convincing heft and humaneness to the character of Mary Regina, Mother Superior; her climax came with her inadvertently intoxicated transformation into a black leather and sunglasses big mama. I began to wonder about the previous vocation of Amy Washburn who glistened with graciousness while compelling thought and action with great voice of command in the person of Sister Mary Hubert. Jeanne Wooster brought natural earthiness, urbane humor and supernatural confusion to her Brooklyn-born character, Sister Robert Anne, alumna of "St. Claire's School for the Deplorable." Eleanor Wylde's Mary Amnesia was quirky and volatile as befitted the revelation of her lost fantasy, her renounced "calling from afar" — to have become another Brenda Lee in Nashville. And Jessica Ann Stevenson as Sister Mary Leo added a vital note of fresh-blooded acumen and naivete as the novice dancing through morning prayers in pointe shoes with unrepressed ballerina dreams.

Poignant touch

But there's a twist in the ambiance, suggested from the start by John Rousseau's set design. The script explains that a production of Grease at "Mount Saint Helen's School" called for the backdrop of James Dean and Marilyn Monroe blow-ups, and somehow a very poignant one of a LIFE magazine cover from 1953 with the younger Nixon and the headline, "A Vice-president Makes Good." Something here of the stress that this production may hold for some in the audience. Because it invites reconsideration, if not regression, to that earlier era when the habits of nuns were black and white and "things were either wrong or right." Nunsense proposes that we pause a moment to consider our present times, clouded by so many shades of gray when, "Confusion seems to reign supreme / Like God it's everywhere."

The telling point is the rousing finale, "Holier than Thou / I've got the spirit now / I thank God Almighty / I'm holier than thou." Many in the audience seemed ready to spring on their feet.

Yet, we don't quite get off so easily. There's something more serious registered in Sister Robert Anne's poignant story of why she chose to become a nun as a consequence of the good Latin invocations at old Saint Claire's where she "learned to pray." I could feel the abounding joy when the sisters displayed that strength of purposeful femininity and the unique power of female team effort that some convents can still accomplish.

Women more animated

What to make of them, these persons, these nuns — Nunsense? Some kind of women, and in my observation, the women in the audience seemed more animated than the men through the evening. Musical comedy is supposed to be good fun, and this production very often is. But after the catharsis, an array of needs remains.

We may well reject and even laugh at holier-than-thou, but then where do we go for holy-at-all? The post-nunsense question: Is-nothing-sacred? We need to expose pretensions, pomposities, injuring arrogance, intrusive authority. But the image of the consecrated virgin is an ancient icon. What do we learn from these masks? The nun may serve as spiritual jester, but what shall we do now about "Sister Pocahontas," "Attila the Nun," "Sister Princess Lea," not to mention Sister Madonna. If not laid on someone else, these contradictions remain within and must be contained.

CAST MEMBER Eleanor Wylde.
